

Online appeal helps out homeless teenager

A TEENAGER who had been sleeping rough under a bridge in Oswestry for four weeks has been given emergency hotel accommodation thanks to an online appeal.

More than £1,000 was raised in just three days to help the young Oswestry man after his plight was discovered.

The Chalk community interest company, which organises an open house lunch on Christmas Day, had been giving out sleeping bags and warm clothes to those who are living in makeshift or cold accommodation in the town.

Gemma Cassin from Chalk said: "We met a scared, cold, vulnerable teenager who had been sleeping under a bridge due to family breakdown. He is not priority for the council so they were unable to offer him emergency accommodation.

"We felt he was too vulnerable to continue sleeping under a bridge so paid for him to spend the night in a hotel."

Unable to fund further nights for the teenager, Chalk launched a GoFundMe appeal on the internet.

Gemma said: "We'd really like him to be somewhere safe and warm while we support him back into the life he wants - a home and a job. Chalk is a small business without the finances to keep him there." Gemma said the 19-year old had been working just a few months ago and had done since 15.

She said: "He unfortunately lost his job due to him being homeless." In just 72 hours the appeal had raised £1,030 of the £1,045 that Chalk says will keep him in safe accommodation until the new year. Meanwhile, bosses at Chalk are appealing for blankets and sleeping bags to help those in need. They said Oswestry had a "hidden homeless" problem.

EDUCATION

Parents' group urges council to stand firm over row

A GROUP which represents parents who want their children to be educated in Welsh has called for a council to stand firm over a move which could scupper a £13 million schools plan for Welshpool.

It was revealed last week that an unknown person asked for listed building status for Ysgol Maesydre, a move which may scupper the development of two schools, a Welsh and an English medium school. Now Ceri McEvoy, director of development at Rhieni Dros Addysg Gymraeg, has weighed into the argument and wants Powys County Council to fight the listed building proposal.

She said: "We have written to the cabinet member for education to express our genuine concern about these recent reports which suggests that there are serious risks to the plans for long-term investment in Welsh medium primary education provision in Welshpool."

"The demolition of the old Maesydre School is an essential part of the development and means that Welshpool's first Welsh medium school will be permanently housed in a purpose-built building with first class resources."

The organisation has pledged to give its full backing to the council.

BUSINESS

Last-ditch deal will 'ensure care'

BRITAIN'S second-biggest care homes operator, which has a site near Oswestry, has struck a last-ditch deal with its major creditor that staves off the immediate threat of administration.

But the future of 17,000 elderly residents across 343 homes run by Four Seasons is still in doubt. Locally the company operates Meadowbrook Care Home in Gobowen.

The new deal will ensure "continuity of care for residents" until a long term restructuring is agreed, bosses say.

CRISIS 'PROVES WE NEED UNIT'

Report by Sue Austin

THE current maternity crisis in Shropshire proves the birthing unit at Oswestry must be reopened permanently, campaigners insisted this week.

The ward, housed at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital, will reopen on January 1 after being closed for six months because of staff shortages.

However, its long-term future is uncertain. Consultation over a countywide review of maternity services - which recommends only having births at the Royal Shrewsbury or Princess Royal hospitals or at home - is due to begin in the new year.

To add to the uncertainty, the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital maternity unit is currently closed due to roof damage which means expectant Oswestry parents who want to have their child in Shropshire have to travel to Telford or choose a home birth.

Liz Grayston from the Save Oswestry Maternity Unit campaign urged mothers-to-be not only to book in to have their babies delivered in Oswestry from January 1 but to make use of the inpatient, post natal care.

This can be used by mothers who not only give birth in Oswestry but also in the consultant unit in Telford. Mrs Grayston said: "Women in this area must show how important the birthing and post natal inpatient unit is for Oswestry by using it. There are very worried mothers-to-be and their families who thought that they would have to, reluctantly, have their babies delivered in Shrewsbury who are now having to go to Telford between now and January 1."

Health bosses have defended the proposed future arrangements, insisting they will bring an improved service.

SCORES of fundraising runners ditched the usual hi-tech training gear and instead decked themselves in tinsel, fancy dress costumes and Santa hats when they completed a festive fun run near Oswestry in aid of a good cause.

Ashling Donohoe-Harrison, 32, and Victoria Hall, 38, organised the family event at the British Ironwork Centre at Aston as part of their fundraising for next year's London Marathon.

The pair are running the marathon in aid of Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital in Gobowen, where they both work.

The sold-out fun run on Sunday saw 175 runners complete a three kilometre course around the popular tourist attraction which was decorated ready for Christmas.

Ashling, who works in the X-ray department at the award-winning hospital, said: "It went so well and I'm just so glad the weather

"When we were setting up in the morning it was pouring with rain so I was just praying it was going to be alright."

"It was absolutely magical because the ironworks was all decorated."

"I just want to say a big thank you to the ironworks because they have been so helpful. "All of the money raised through entry fees will go straight into our marathon fund for the hospital."

Shake-up 'will be better all round for expectant mums'

Report by Lisa O'Brien

SHAKING-UP maternity services in Shropshire will be a "change for the better", health bosses have insisted.

Proposals for a new service model for midwifery led services have been approved for consultation by Shropshire clinical commissioning group.

The model will be presented to Telford CCG's governing body on January 9 and will need similar approval before a consultation can begin.

The revised model would see women giving birth at Telford, Shrewsbury, or at home, while antenatal and postnatal care would take place at maternity hubs across the county, earmarked for Shrewsbury, Telford, Bridgnorth, Ludlow and Oswestry. Under the plans births will no longer take place at Oswestry's maternity unit.

The proposals have been put forward following a review.

Health bosses say the findings demonstrated a mismatch between staffing and activity.

They say under the existing system it is not possible to guarantee one-to-one care during delivery, as there is a shortfall of midwifery cover at the consultant unit - where 85 per cent of women have their babies, and an excess of midwifery cover at the three smallest freestanding midwife led units.

Dr Jess Sokolov, Shropshire CCG's clinical lead for the midwife led services review, speaking on behalf of both Shropshire and Telford & Wrekin CCGs, said: "The current system cannot remain as it is because the midwives are not based in the places where they are actually needed. I understand people may have concerns about change but this proposal is a change for the better where services are actually being enhanced to offer more support for more women close to home."

"Whilst the proposed new model will continue to offer a full range of birthing options, it also introduces a new concept of maternity hubs across the county to bring together a whole range of maternity related services."

Hospital helpers' commitment is recognised

Representatives from the League of Friends group at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital receive the award

THE League of Friends at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital received the partnership award at the hospital's awards evening.

Chair of the League of Friends Peter David said: "This accolade pays tribute to the unending support we receive from our fundraisers and volunteers."

"We are so pleased to receive this on their behalf and extend a huge thank you for their generous service."

The award to the League of Friends was presented by Kerry Robinson, director of strategy and planning at the trust who praised the group's support and dedication to the hospital. The group is currently searching for more volunteers, bosses at the organisation have said.

Anyone with some spare time and who would like to help the group should contact Victoria Sugden on (01691) 404401 or (01691) 404527.

Plans for ballooning festival are supported

COUNCILLORS have unanimously backed plans to bring a balloon festival to Oswestry next year.

During a special meeting on Monday evening, Oswestry Town Councillors heard proposals about holding a balloon festival in the centre of the town in Cae Glas Park.

The festival would be held between Lindstrand Balloons, Cloud Nine Balloons and Nightingale House charity, which ran an original event in Llangollen. Town Clerk Dave Preston told councillors that Lindstrand had agreed to underwrite a cost of between £6,000 and £10,000, to cover balloon gas, camping and hospitality for balloon owners.

Mayor Vince Hunt said: "I fully support this and by us putting this on it shows what we have just agreed on our commitment to tourism."

"We have put a number of successful events on and for me this event is perfect for the town."

"It will raise revenue and I think we will get money back on our investment."

Mr Preston said the council had budgeted £10,000 for costs such as security, road closures and holding live music on the bailey head.

Councillor Peter Cherrington added: "I agree this will increase the future for the town and will attract people to Oswestry for years and years to come."

Crews called to tackle unsafe roof

FIREFIGHTERS were called out to help fix an unsafe roof in Welshpool.

Crews were called at mid afternoon on Thursday last week to a block of offices in Church Street. They used equipment to make the area safe. No injuries were reported.

It was believed that the adverse weather conditions of the previous week caused the damage.

Report by Jordan Reynolds

SHROPSHIRE'S hospitals are introducing a new protocol after the death of a respected journalist.

Mike Robinson, from Oswestry, died at the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital on September 8.

The 65-year-old had been diagnosed with oesophageal cancer and had a feeding tube fitted through his abdomen into his bowel.

An inquest Tuesday heard the tube moved from its place in the bowel and the contents went into Mr Robinson's body, leading to sepsis and his death.

Giving a narrative conclusion, Coroner John Ellery said: "Mr Robinson has died not because of cancer but from consequences following this surgical procedure. There was a failure to monitor its position and a failure to recognise that it had become displaced. The displacement of the tube led to Mr Robinson's premature death because he would not have died when he did had the tube not been displaced and had the nutrients not gone outside his abdomen leading to sepsis from which he died."

Jon Lacy-Colson, consultant colorectal surgeon, said he had no doubt that the tube was in the right place when the operation was being performed. He said: "Post mortem it had shortened and was outside the bowel. It relies on somebody checking and recording to make sure it was in place afterwards and we found no record that it was checked. The trust does not currently have a routine protocol, we feel moving forward it's appropriate for us to have a routine protocol for staff to follow."

The inquest also heard that Mr Robinson's family had concerns over the speed of his diagnosis.

Manel Riera was the endoscopist Mr Robinson was referred to on a routine basis by his GP.

Mr Riera told the inquest in Shrewsbury: "On balance he would still have advanced cancer unfortunately if he'd waited two weeks rather than a routine referral, I don't believe this would've changed his outcome."

Panto stars cheer up young patients

With young patient Olivia Ferraday at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital are Michael Jenkins, Megan Ashley, Olivia's mum Hannah Jones, Tony Discipline and Kyle Corrin

THE cast of a popular festive pantomime delivered a jolly helping of Christmas cheer to the children's ward at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital when they popped in for a visit.

The young patients on Alice Ward were treated to a visit by the stars of the pantomime Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, taking place at The Stiwt Theatre in Rhosllannerchrugog near Oswestry this month.

Former Eastenders actor Tony Discipline, who is playing Prince Charming, Megan Ashley, who is starring as Snow White, Michael Jenkins from Gobowen and who is playing Herman the Henchman and Kyle Corrin, who is playing Muddles, spent the afternoon entertaining and chatting to the youngsters.

The children were even treated to a song from Snow White - who sang 'How Far I'll Go' from the popular Disney film 'Moana'.

Michael, who is also directing the pantomime, said it was a "joy" to visit the children. He said: "It was wonderful to spend time on Alice Ward entertaining and interacting with the children. Pantomime is all about having fun and making everyone smile, and from the children's faces, it certainly looked as though they enjoyed our time with them."

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs will be at the Stiwt Theatre until December 31. Tickets are available from stiwt.com or by calling the box office on (01978) 841300.

NEWS IN BRIEF

80 drink drive arrests are made

MORE than 80 motorists have been arrested for drink or drug driving in the first few days of a festive crackdown.

West Mercia Police said it has arrested 84 people across the force area during the Christmas and New Year campaign.

The force launched the campaign on December 1 with enforcement activities across the region.

Over the past three years, 13 people were killed and 109 seriously injured in West Mercia following collisions where drink or drugs were recorded as a contributory factor, police bosses have said.

Council tax rises by 2.37 per cent

HOUSEHOLDERS in Shropshire will be facing an increase in their council tax bill next year.

Members of Shropshire Council's cabinet gave the go-ahead for a 2.37 per cent increase in properties for 2018/19.

Leader of the council, Councillor Peter Nutting said the increase would feed into the budgets of town and parish councils, adding: "They should end up better off."

Jobless total falls for a third month

UNEMPLOYMENT in Shropshire has fallen for a third month in a row.

The latest claimant count figures from the Office for National Statistics showed that 50 fewer people claimed unemployment related benefits in Telford & Wrekin last month - taking the total to 1,825.

This represents 1.7 cent of the workforce.

But in the Shropshire Council area, the claimant count increased by 10 to 1,975, meaning that 1.1 per cent of the workforce was receiving jobless benefits.

The 640 people claiming benefits in Powys was down 40 from last month's figure, leaving the Mid Wales county with a claimant rate of 0.8 per cent.

Court prosecution prompts counterfeit goods warning

Report by Jonny Drury

TRADERS who supply counterfeit goods over the internet or through local supply chains could face legal action with substantial penalties, as well as losing all the money they have made from their criminal activities, Powys County Council has warned.

The warning has been issued by the council's Trading Standards Service after it successfully prosecuted a man in court for offering counterfeit goods he had bought to sell on.

Home fears man took his own life

A PENSIONER took his own life after becoming worried about having to leave the house he had lived in all his life.

John Bryan Rowlinson, 72, from Morda, Oswestry, died in August in his home.

An inquest heard Mr Rowlinson was born in the house and had lived there his whole life. Coroner John Ellery said Mr Rowlinson believed he was not going to be able to move back into his house after repairs were done and was going to have to live in Minsterley. He said: "He was a single man, he never married and he didn't have any children. His parents died some time ago. After his parents died he became a sitting tenant. He was worried that he was being asked to leave his property. He would have had rights to stay there. New landlords had taken over and in order to carry out repairs they asked him to move out temporarily for repairs to be completed and he would then move back in."

"I understand John was concerned that he was going to be made to leave."

"He went to see the local council and arrangements were being made that he could go to Minsterley. That seems to be the prime reason."

Mr Ellery recorded a conclusion of suicide.

David Gospel now of Birmingham but formerly of Welshpool, pleaded guilty to five offences under the Trade Marks Act 1994 at Llandrindod Wells Magistrates Court and was sentenced to a 12-month community order.

He was also given 15 hours probation, 80 hours unpaid work and ordered to contribute £500 to the council's costs of £1,975 as well as having to pay a £85 victim after an early plea.

During the hearing, Robert Brown prosecution solicitor explained that the proceedings involved an investigation conducted by officers from the council's Trading Standards Service, after they were called in by Dyfed Powys Police after Gospel was stopped on a road traffic stop in October 2016.

His vehicle was found to contain a quantity of suspected counterfeit goods, mostly clothing and footwear, and further quantities were also found at his home premises in Welshpool in a subsequent search.

Trading standards officers also found that Gospel had offered the goods on various sites on social media. All products were seized by Trading Standards and all found to be counterfeit.

Councillor Jonathan Wilkinson, cabinet member for trading standards, said: "We support legitimate businesses and local tax payers by targeting illegal shadow economy activities such as product counterfeiting by individuals, who have little regard to the county's traders and only seek to further destabilise our economy. Firm action is needed on any issues related to product counterfeiting to promote fair trading within our community and to take the criminal benefit away from those that conduct in criminal activity. We will continue this work to support the intellectual property rights of our local businesses."

BREEZE ABOUT TOWN

I've been more than a little hacked off in the past week by people moaning and groaning about the council not clearing the snow from roads leading to houses in the most obscure locations of Powys.

People really do expect too much.

Welshpool and the borders areas were hit by the worst snow in over a decade.

Like many others I found myself cut off by road for three days.

And that was even with a 4x4 parked on the drive.

That's because I choose to live on the top of a hill.

I accept that from time to time extreme weather might cause me a problem.

But it seems not all feel the same way.

People welcomed the opportunity to sound off on social media that gritters were not reaching their homes.

I wonder sometimes which world some of these people really live in.

Staff in the Powys County Council highways department worked around the clock for days.

They struggled to keep the main routes open through the massive county and sometimes putting their own safety at risk to keep us on the move.

And thanks to modern communication methods the council kept us all up to date on road conditions and with weather warnings.

There were moans that salt bins were not being re-filled in cut-off locations.

And there were even complaints that recycling hadn't been collected from residents on streets and roads which were clearly impassable.

Where do these people come from?

Powys County Council has the most up-to-date equipment for dealing with snow but we have to accept that it will never be possible to keep the whole of the county on the move in situations like we have just experienced.

Some of the moaners would do well to hear two heart-warming stories which emerged in Welshpool to help restore faith in the younger generation.

The first involved a young lady knocking on the doors of residents in sheltered housing accommodation and offering to go out for essentials for those trapped inside and the second saw a young man offering people lifts on his quad bike to get them to and from their 'cut-off' properties.

It's not all bad news.

The building of the bypass is a huge undertaking

Nick Cleary and Russell George on the hardcore base

Construction on the Dolfor Bridge is an impressive sight

Shape of things to come as bypass work continues

Work is continuing on a new bypass for Newtown. JONNY DRURY finds out more

ANYONE from Oswestry or Welshpool who has needed to drive through Mid Wales will know all about the traffic problems in Newtown.

Congestion in Newtown has been a word on almost everyone's lips for decades and calls for a bypass have long been ringing around the Montgomeryshire area.

Two years ago that dream became a reality when the green light was given to a bypass to finally be built at a cost of £60 million.

A year-and-a-half later and commuters and residents are starting to see glimpses of the road they will soon be driving along.

More than 50 per cent of the work has now been completed by Alun Griffiths contractors, who won the bypass contract following a three-week public inquiry back in June 2015.

The scene along the route now is a far cry from the scene back in 2006, when the streets were gridlocked and the Welsh Government first started looking at the possibility of a bypass.

Project manager Nick Cleary said a lot of work had already taken place, but there was much more to do before the first car takes a drive down the new road.

He said: "I am happy with where we are, and we are on time for the contract completion date in the spring of 2019."

"However if we can meet targets then

Nick Cleary and Montgomeryshire AM Russell George look at progress

it could be done by the end of 2018. It is as we were expecting, but there is a long way to go yet.

"A lot of work has been done, but a lot of work is left to do.

"Certain things need to be done at certain times for other things to take place.

"We've got one-and-a-half winters left to go and some things are weather dependent, such as the wind and putting up structures."

The battle for a bypass in Newtown has been one that has rumbled on for decades.

Montgomeryshire MP Glyn Davies and Assembly Member Russell George, and the politicians that came before them were pushing for this monumental development to take place.

Work first started taking place around 2006, with the Welsh Government looking at ways to alleviate traffic problems in Newtown.

However, at that time the word bypass was not mentioned as a concrete option. But in 2009 plans started to be drawn up and various routes were put before a three-week public inquiry. The scene now looks completely different to that of 18 months ago, with Glandulas Bridge on the south of the route complete and the Upper Dolfor Road bridge built and in use.

The biggest structure of the route, the bridge at Dolfor Road, which is 94 metres in total span is midway through completion.

It is one of 11 structures that need to be built, including seven bridges.

Four underpasses are to be built, two of which are completed and the route also includes 14 tunnels for wildlife to pass under the road.

The construction is the biggest one Alun Griffiths has ever taken on themselves, and Mr Cleary said there have been challenges along the way.

He said: "It is the biggest one we have done in our own name, others have been as a joint venture with others.

"The challenges have been trying to basically build a bypass on the site of a glacier valley, the topography has been difficult to do." The challenges for the Welsh Government have not been easy either.

Due to a campaign and petition to save the 600-year-old Brimmon Oak Tree, the bypass route had to be slightly altered.

Traffic congestion will be greatly reduced but there are other positives that have already benefited Newtown and the Powys area. Of the 250 workers on the ground at the peak of the construction project, 72 per cent are from Wales and 32 per cent of the workers are from Newtown and the Powys area. Other numbers regarding the work are equally impressive. In total, two-and-a-half million tons of earth is being dug up and moved around as part of the construction - enough to fill the Principality Stadium in Cardiff.

About 80,000 plants are being put in place to screen the bypass so that the impact on the surrounding scenery is minimal. Assembly Member Russell George said he was delighted with the progress made.

He said: "I am just very pleased that the bypass is on schedule, and with some good weather it could be finished ahead of time. It is great to see that some of the bridges are already built and the big structure up Dolfor Road is coming on well."

WORKING FOR YOU

2017 was politically turbulent at Westminster. The driver of this turbulence was the General Election in June which produced a hung parliament. As with all such parliaments, this meant two or more parties seeking an agreement to form a Government. The Conservatives and the Democratic Unionist Party, after much debate, came to what amounts to a confidence and supply plus agreement, which has proved to be very stable.

Personally, the General Election was very much a mixed bag. It was disappointing that the Conservative Party lost its overall majority, but in Montgomeryshire, it was a success beyond our wildest dreams. After more than a century of almost always coming second, Montgomeryshire is now the safest Conservative parliamentary seat in Wales, with a majority nearing 10,000. The Conservatives also enjoyed great success in the elections to Powys County Council in May. Not many years ago, there had not been any Conservative Councillors ever. Since May, there have been 14, and the party has joined with an Independent Group to run Powys County Council. The Council cabinet have an incredibly difficult job ahead of them, restricted by a dreadful financial settlement from the Welsh Government.

2017 has been a very good year for our local economy. Unemployment has fallen to levels lower than I've ever known. The hugely important Newtown Bypass will probably open in 2018, opening up the towns of Machynlleth and Llanidloes to benefit from any Mid Wales Growth Deal. The next major transport developments must be a new Dyfi Bridge and a new A458 road from Welshpool to beyond Mid-dletown. The contentious Brexit debate, and my work in the Wales Office with the Secretary of State, Alun Cairns and Minister, Guto Bebb has been relentless. But I know it's important for Montgomeryshire, which is why I'm so committed to doing my best. I'm also hugely supportive of the Prime Minister, who has ignored the appalling way she has been treated over recent months, but has won great respect for her sense of duty and dedication. And she has delivered, despite so many talking down our great nation and willing her to fail. 2018 will be another very challenging year, but I really do think we can be optimistic about the future for Montgomeryshire, Wales and the United Kingdom.

IF I GO TO PRISON WILL MY CHILDREN BE ABLE TO VISIT ME?

Advertisement

Q: I am due in court next month and the way things are looking I am worried that I may end up going to prison. As I've never been in a prison before I don't know what to expect. I'm especially worried about the effects it will have on my children. Will they be able to visit me in prison? And if they can visit me will they have to go through things like being searched? What will happen if they get upset or bored, will it mean my partner will have to cut short the visit?

A: You don't need to worry about losing contact with your children as they will be able to visit you. The only time they would not be allowed to visit is if you are deemed to present a potential risk to them.

When they visit they will have to stay with the adult that brings them at all times and they must be kept under control. Babies and young children do not normally need to be named on the Visiting Order, nor do they need independent identification, but you should get this confirmed by the individual prison. Pushchairs and carry cots are normally not allowed inside the prison.

All visitors, even babies, are subject to search. Children and female visitors will usually receive just a 'rub down' by a female prison officer. If one of your children is a baby, most prisons will allow you to hold him or her. It would be advisable for there to be two visiting adults if the children are very young, so that one of them can take the children out of the Visit Room if they become bored or fractious.

What is the real cost of nursery care?

IS it not possible for statistics coming in from the Government and other authorities to be made so simple and clear that everyone from young teenagers to those in their hundreds can understand the real cost of a service, the real money available to the service provider, the real deficits, if any etc?

Here's a very simplified way, with made-up figures and it applies to an average cost – definitely fiction not fact, just an illustration. Cost of a free placement in an approved pre-school nursery offering full cover, every day, not just in school terms.

£100 per day to meet required high standards.

£80 per day Government grant.

£20 per day deficit.

So is the Government really giving free places?

This is happening across the board. Saying "we will put in £10 billion over the next five years" is meaningless. We need to know:

* Average cost per head to meet the high standards.

* The average money given by Government per head to meet the high standards.

* What is the deficit?

* To get to, let alone keep the required standards, how will the gap be filled?

Take a leaf out of Doddy's book and get common sense

THE Common Sense Party, the CSP the way forward, would like to take this opportunity to celebrate our greatest living Briton, Ken Dodd.

Even as our poll ratings slump lower than a snake in a cart track we cannot ignore the great man's 90th birthday. Where would this great country of ours be without such Doddysms as: "What a beautiful day, what a beautiful day for running up to the vicarage front door, shoving a cucumber through it and shouting the Martians have landed!" Why haven't the government taken him along to all the Brexit negotiations? If anyone looks like they could do with a laugh it's that man from Luxembourg, Mr Juncker. Can anyone name a comedian from Luxembourg? Is there anything remotely funny about Luxembourg?

So here are some proposals for putting the smile back into the UK that I have been working on while sitting here in Belmarsh Prison.

Wonderful Land by The Shadows to be played on the radio more often.

No more inaccurate live TV reporting with inferior information, sound, pictures and someone waving their arms around.

No one with whitened teeth to be allowed on TV.

The word Brexit should be made illegal and replaced with Banana. Hence departing the EU to be referred to as the Banana negotiations.

Get to know your British history, there have been worse times.

Call for reality check on debts

IT'S time for a reality check.

The Armed Forces are being starved of funds.

Meanwhile this year alone more than £13 billion is being borrowed to send to countries overseas.

The electrification of mainline railway routes is being postponed at the same time as at least £52bn will have to be borrowed for HS2.

The National Health Service cries out for money.

Meanwhile another £20bn or more will have to be borrowed to pay off the EU.

A staggering further £48bn will need to be borrowed in the current financial year to meet the interest charges on the National Debt, itself now more than double the £800bn it was in 2010.

What these figures demonstrate is a scarcely credible level of fiscal incontinence for which the long-suffering British taxpayer must ultimately pick up the tab.

Take care of your own great wonder – the human body

I REMEMBER as a youngster travelling into a Welsh valley and staring with awe and wonder at the towering mountainsides.

In a busy workaday world it's easy to be caught in the mundane hustle and noise to lose our sense of wonder. Have you ever noticed a young child stare wide eyed at a dog or cat and cry out in pleasure? Many city dwellers like to get out into the country to just gaze at the beauty of the autumn colours, and of course there are also man-made wonders like the Iron Bridge and the Pontcysyllte Aqueduct and mobile phones. But have you ever stopped to think that YOU are a wonder, your body I mean. Eat a few sandwiches and it turns it into energy to walk miles. The digestive system is capable of turning a vast variety of foods which sustain people. Your body has about 70,000 miles of blood vessels. With the right training your body can perform incredible actions, just watch a gymnast. So remember you are a wonder, love yourself and take good care of that body.

May's hypocrisy on Catalan stance

WE have to poke our nose in, don't we? People in Catalonia wanted independence.

Mrs May was one of the first to support the Spanish government in opposing it.

What hypocrisy! Would she like it if Catalonia vehemently opposed our own attempts to free ourselves from the EU?

Come to think of it, perhaps she would. Or am I the only one yet to be convinced that her heart is in leaving?

Housing stock review brings us worries and stress

I RECEIVED a letter in the post from Star Housing (our housing association) in regards to employing a third party, namely "Savills" to review its housing stock.

In short, my wife who is disabled and I who are OAPs reside in a bungalow in Shifnal, along with several other residents who are older than ourselves.

There are nine bungalows and from talking to other neighbours, a similar exercise was carried out prior to 2011. The residents at the time, some of who still reside here got a big petition up to fight their case. They won but we fear that this is just another impending way of getting tenants to move.

We know that we will not be made homeless but the point is, that we and others have spent a lot of money getting our homes and gardens up to a standard that we wanted. Some of us are not in the best of health and this is all we need in terms of stress, worry and anger.

People of all ages ran the course at the visitor attraction

Pam Lloyd, Sue Austin, Demi Williams, Bev Larkins and Lou Williams were ready for the run challenge

Faz Solaymam eyes up the festive event

Colourful costumes bring festive cheer

FUNDRAISING runners pulled out all the stops to ensure a festive fun run went down a treat at the weekend.

The event was held at the British Ironwork Centre at Aston near Oswestry and was organised by Ashling Donohoe-Harrison, 32, and Victoria Hall, 38.

The pair organised the fundraiser as part of their money-spinning efforts for next year's London Marathon.

The pair are running the marathon in aid of Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital in Gobowen, where they both work.

Ashling said: "We are both runners but we've only done a half marathon before so I'm excited. Now the fundraising is all sorted I'm starting to think more about all the miles I'm going to have to run."

They've also hosted a quiz night and sold homemade festive gifts, and both women have now raised £1,500 for the hospital.

The sold-out fun run on Sunday saw 175 runners complete a three kilometre course around the popular tourist attraction which was decorated ready for Christmas.

And it was not just the site itself which had a strong Christmas theme.

Many of the runners took time to dress up in their festive best to ensure there was as much fun at the fun run as possible.

There were more than a few Father Christmases darting around the course at the visitor attraction and even one or two Christmas puddings were spotted.

It may have been a December day but plenty of the runners donned festive sunglasses to brighten up proceedings.

A few reindeer were spotted on the course too while there was a smattering of elves around.

And going above and beyond in the festive fashion stakes was Katy Cottrell who ran the race dressed up as a Christmas tree.

Key staff to stand down from roles with canal

THIS year marks the end of an era for the Canal & River Trust's North Wales and Borders Waterway with the retirement of three key staff.

Collectively the three staff members have notched up nearly a century of service to the canals.

Waterway manager Wendy Capelle, who is based in the charity's North-wich office, is due to leave this month after 18 years of service, with her departure happening just before her 60th birthday on Christmas Day.

Howard Griffiths, 59, has just retired as the trust's customer service supervisor for the Llangollen and Montgomery canals.

Based out of the Ellesmere office, he has lived all his life on the Montgomery Canal.

Howard has mixed work and pleasure in a career spanning 39 years caring for his local waterways.

His father was also a canalman for 24 years.

Howard has remarkably spent his entire life living in the same lock keeper's cottage at Aston Locks, near Oswestry, where he was born, raised, married and brought up four daughters of his own.

Neville Preece, 62, who will retire in early 2018, is the supervisor for the southern section of the Shropshire Union Canal.

He is based out of Norbury.

He first started working on the waterways 41 years ago as part of the dredging fleet on the River Weaver Navigation.

It was then still used by commercial cargo vessels.

Over the years he has taken on a number of roles from length foreman and harbour master to a supervisor in Chester.

Report by Jordan Reynolds

WEST Mercia Police force has been told it requires improvement after an inspection.

The force, which covers Shropshire, was told that more work was needed on how it keeps people safe and reduces crime.

The judgement came as part of annual inspections into police effectiveness, efficiency and legitimacy across England and Wales by HM Inspectorate of Constabulary and Fire and Rescue Services.

The force was told it required improvement across three areas – treating the people it serves with fairness and respect, ensuring its workforce behaves ethically and lawfully, and aspects of treating its workforce with fairness and respect.

Responding to the findings, Assistant Chief Constable Martin Evans, of West Mercia Police, said: "While we are disappointed with the 'requires improvement' rating, the report does recognise that much good work has already been done in the vital areas of policing it covers.

"We are committed to treating people with fairness, ensuring we act ethically and lawfully and treating our workforce with fairness and respect. We will use the findings of the report to ensure that we build on the progress already made in these areas and continue to improve." The report says that leaders need to provide the workforce with training so the force acts fairly. It says: "Although leaders clearly demonstrate that they understand and value the benefits of procedural justice, they need to provide the workforce with training so the force acts fairly, treats people with respect and communicates effectively."

AM backs hair and beauty industry

Russell George with ISA Training's chief executive Shirley Davis-Fox

THE Assembly Member for Montgomeryshire, Russell George, has welcomed new research which reveals that hair and beauty salons contribute up to £283 million a year to the Welsh economy and employ 11,000 people.

Mr George attended a reception at the Senedd in Cardiff when ISA Training, the largest independent hair and beauty training provider in Wales, launched the economic impact assessment report.

ISA Training's chief executive Shirley Davis-Fox said the report ought to be essential reading for politicians and called on the Welsh Government to make hair and beauty a priority sector.

Mr George said: "This important research has challenged the misconceptions surrounding this profession and has highlighted the true economic value and impact of the hair and beauty sector to Wales. With over 2400 businesses employing almost 11,000 people, the sector contributes £283 million to the Welsh economy, is a key employer and, unlike many service and retail sectors, it guarantees that money earned in a locality is spent and retained in Wales. For too long, this sector has been undervalued."

Video shows life of town in 1960s

COLOUR footage has emerged of what Welshpool was like in the 1960s.

Videos have emerged online, giving residents a taste of what things were like in the town 54 years ago.

The 90-second video clip shows a train running from the Raven Roundabout and down the back road on its original track towards the Old Smithfield.

The film was found by a Welshpool resident who shared it on social media, and was discovered in the BFI archives.

The caption with the film says: "In this film by William Arthur 'Cam' Camwell, we see one of the original W&L locomotives with a train of volunteers as they cross the level crossing and take a winding trip into the town section."

New awards will recognise care

A POLICE force is celebrating the work of its officers and staff with the launch of #WeCare award.

Dyfed-Powys Police is in need of the public's help and want people who have come into contact with the force to nominate individuals who have gone above and beyond to provide exceptional care and support.

This could range from a police officers who has kept a victim updated on the progress of an investigation or a family liaison officer who has supported a family during tragic times, to a schools officer who has helped youngsters deal with difficult issues.

The award also extends to members of staff who have proved to be invaluable to community groups, from helping to run safety campaigns or providing reassurance at Pact meetings. Nominations can be emailed to AnnualAwards@dyfed-powys.pnn.police.uk

Ding Dong ale hits market

A MID Wales brewery has created a Christmas ale, which is selling in a host of Co-op stores across the UK.

Monty's Brewery, based in Montgomery, has come up with the Ding Dong ale, which adds to products already sold in the Co-op, such as Sunshine and Moonrise.

The new product will be in around 100 Co-op stores this Christmas.

Pam Honeyman, co-founder of Monty's Brewery and head Brewer, explained: "Ding Dong is a golden, light ale."

"We were keen to brew a Christmas beer that is not over-powering, and is ideal for the home market and gifts."

Backing given to plastic campaign

A CAMPAIGN to rid Powys of plastic has been backed by a councillor.

Councillor Liam Fitzpatrick, cabinet member for highways at Powys County Council, gave his support to the Plastic Free Powys campaign that was launched earlier this month.

He said: "I'm very lucky to travel this county every week, checking roads and talking to people about our communities and neighbourhoods."

The councillor added: "However, it depresses me daily to see our beautiful countryside covered in litter and plastic debris from burger cartons, food trays and plastic drink containers and bottles."

"It's all unnecessary and starts in our food stores, supermarkets and shops and that is why I attended the launch of the 'Plastic Free Powys' campaign."

Objections aired to key renewable energy plan

Report by Jonny Drury

A NUMBER of objections have been made to renewable energy changes in the latest consultation on a controversial Local Development Plan.

A host of rounds of consultations have already taken place into the LDP, which has caused a stir among objectors to renewable energy in Powys.

The process of the latest development plan began in 2010 before a revised version was put forward in 2013. Now the council is attempting to finalise its plans on the future of housing, infrastructure, energy and other topics. The latest round of consultations showed 740 responses from across the county, with some objectors unhappy with the housing plans outlined.

Comments included questioning why there has been a reduction in the number of affordable homes being offered. One objector said: "A significant increase in housing provision is required in order to provide the affordable housing needed."

Objectors from Montgomery near Welshpool were concerned about plans which would see 300 homes earmarked for land in the town, and they believe there isn't the infrastructure to deal with the development. A key feature of the LDP over previous years has been the inclusion of solar and wind energy.

Despite a reduction in the proposed size of the developments, some residents say they remain unhappy with the plans.

Campaigners meet MP over asylum

The campaigners with Montgomeryshire MP Glyn Davies in Parliament

MEMBERS of Mid Wales Refugee Action have met Montgomeryshire MP Glyn Davies in Parliament to campaign for a more humane asylum system.

The day-long #DignityNotDestitution event was hosted by Bristol West MP Thangam Debbonaire, chair of the All Party Parliamentary Group on Refugees (APPRG).

More than 200 people attended including refugee testimonies, poetry readings by primary school students and opportunities for MPs to meet with those seeking safety.

Campaigners are seeking support from MPs for amendments to a new Immigration Act including permission to work being granted to any person seeking asylum that has been waiting for longer than six months. Campaigner Kim Bryan said: "Our MP expressed openness towards the crucial issue of asylum seekers right to work and agreed to bring the issue to the immigration minister, Brandon Lewis during the next weeks". Campaigner Giulio Mescia said the group's lobbying would continue.

Alert over scam which targets fake bank crime

CONSUMERS should be alert to a scam in which criminals pose as police officers and ask their victims to take part in a fake undercover operation.

Dyfed-Powys Police said fraudsters are contacting members of the public, usually by phone, claiming to be from the police, or in some cases the fraud team within their bank.

The criminal claims they are investigating a fraud at a local bank branch where staff are suspected of being complicit, including issuing fake bank notes, and asks their target to help in the operation.

As part of the scam, the individual is requested to visit the branch and withdraw a substantial sum, often thousands of pounds, of the supposedly counterfeit cash to hand over to the 'police for analysis'. The victim is assured that the money will be deposited back into their account after the operation is complete. However, once the money is passed over the fraudster disappears with the cash.

Paul Callard, financial crime team manager for Dyfed-Powys Police, said: "This scam has targeted individuals in our force area and we've actually received a report from a female victim in her 70s from Crickhowell, who was conned out of almost £15,000."

"The victim was able to get the initial £5,000 back from the victims bank however has not been able to get the other £9,638.16 back. Scams like these have such a negative impact on victims. I would urge people to please act with caution if approached by these types of scamsters. If in doubt, hang up and ring police on 101."

Football camps at town school

A FORMER Shrewsbury Town and Newtown footballer is holding football camps in Oswestry in the New Year.

Callum Wright will be holding The Wright Way soccer camps at Oswestry School.

The football camps will take place on January 4 and 5, the organisers have said.

They will run between 10am and 3pm, and the cost is £15 to attend the camps.

The camps are for boys and girls aged between five and 12.

Participants are asked to bring warm clothes, lunch, a water bottle, shin pads and trainers.

To book a place call 07814 499125 or e-mail callum@thewrightway-group.co.uk.

Scenic walks are set to be surveyed

SURVEYING works on a series of walking routes in north Powys will be carried out by the local authority.

Powys County Council's Countryside Services Team will be resurveying tracks using public rights of way in the Dyfi Valley and would like to hear from volunteers interested in helping with the surveys.

Three years ago, the countryside services team and Natural Resources Wales finished opening up the walking routes in the Dyfi Valley as part of a project called 'Darganfod Dyfi' or 'Explore Dyfi'. The project included neighbouring counties of Ceredigion and Gwynedd in the lower Dyfi Valley, roughly centred around Machynlleth.

There are five walks in Powys ranging in length from under four miles up to seven miles.

Email rightsoway@powys.gov.uk for more details.

Report by Jonny Drury

A COUNCIL'S adult services will go under the microscope just months after a scathing review into children's services.

The Care and Social Services Inspectorate Wales will visit Powys County Council soon, the first inspection into the adult services since 2015.

The inspections will come just a few months after the council was told it needed to vastly improve its children's services, after a report found that youngsters were being put at risk.

Last month it was revealed the Welsh Government was discussing a support package to help the council turn the situation around. Now the local authority has received notification from the inspectorate that it will be returning in January with feedback provided later in the year.

Council leader Rosemarie Harris said: "The council was due an inspection of its adult service next summer but was expecting an earlier visit following comments in the wake of the children's services inspection recommendations. While inspections can be daunting for staff and elected members they are a valuable tool for service improvement. The 2015 inspection, which followed concerns surrounding changes to our domiciliary care service, was insightful and provided helpful advice to improve the way we manage and deliver service to our residents."

Cabinet member for adult services, Councillor Stephen Hayes, added: "Inspections provide us with the opportunity to test the effectiveness of our services and provide us with valuable information about areas where we need to strengthen operations."

Appeal to help 'hidden homeless'

Gemma Cassin at Chalk is appealing for items to help homeless people

AN urgent appeal has been launched for blankets and sleeping bags to help Oswestry's "hidden homeless".

Men and women are facing biting winds and sub zero temperatures with only cars, tents, ramshackle buildings, or even alleyways, to protect them.

The community interest company Chalk says the scale of the problem is not fully appreciated.

Gemma Cassin from Chalk revealed that volunteers work behind the scenes to help those who either do not have a roof over their heads or are living in unheated houses. She said: "There are plenty of people who have to make the choice between food or warmth and do not heat their homes. We know of people who are sleeping in their cars or in makeshift shelters in Oswestry."

"Items like flasks, handwarmers and anything else that can help those with no heating will make a difference."

Anyone who has spare bedding and other items can drop them off at Chalk's two shops in Oswestry, both on Leg Street.

The organisation is currently organising its fourth Christmas Day lunch, which will be held at The Centre in Oak Street between 10am and 2pm.

Councillors make call for new inquiry over 'failures'

AN independent probe needs to be launched into the "failures" of a children's services department that was criticised by inspectors, it has been claimed.

The Care and Social Services Inspectorate for Wales produced a damning report on the service at Powys County Council, saying that children had been put at serious risk of harm. Now the three leaders of the opposition groups on the council have demanded that a root and branch investigation is launched into the way the Independent/Conservative coalition-run council has been managed at senior level. Welsh Liberal Democrat Group Leader, Councillor James Gibson-Watt said: "The inspectors made it clear that the failures in children's services lay not with the social work staff delivering services to vulnerable children and young people and their families, but at political and corporate leadership levels."

In response, Council Leader Rosemarie Harris, Leader of Powys County Council, said: "The Welsh Government has agreed for Sean Harris to undertake a scoping review as part of a phased package of support and he has started this review work. Sean is a highly experienced former local government chief executive and we are confident that he can bring a different perspective the challenges our council faces and add real value to the work which is already underway."

"The review will also provide an external assessment of all the council's corporate plans to ensure they are properly focussed and deliverable. It will look at a range of our supporting processes, services and frameworks to ensure we can deliver on our priorities."

Support for consumers locked into cash deals

POWYS County Council is backing a campaign which offers support to people who are locked into a subscription for an offer they didn't sign up for.

An estimated two million people across the UK still experience issues cancelling recurring payments for subscriptions without their apparent authorisation.

The Chartered Trading Standards Institute (CTSI) has released two video animation guides for consumers, businesses and financial institutions on subscription issues.

The first animation is aimed at businesses who offer subscriptions to their customers. Whether selling gym memberships, health or beauty products, streaming services or periodic subscriptions, all businesses must follow a strict set of laws designed to protect consumers from unfair practices.

The second animation gives practical advice for consumers to make them think before they sign and not be tempted by free trial offers.

If consumers find themselves caught in a trap then banks need to be aware of their responsibilities to customers struggling with subscription issues.

The move is being supported by Powys County Council.

Councillor Jonathan Wilkinson, Powys County Council's cabinet member for trading standards, said: "Our trading standards teams are keen to help banks and financial institutions ensure their customers are protected from subscriptions issues.

"Continued payment authorities can cause serious debt problems for consumers when left unmonitored, and we hope businesses ensure their terms and conditions are clear and transparent."

CTSI chief executive Leon Livermore said: "Raising awareness of the issues facing consumers is key to tackling consumer detriment."

Child burial fees scrapped in Wales

BURIAL and cremation fees for children who have died in Wales have been scrapped.

Grieving parents will no longer have to pay fees, after a memorandum of understanding with local authorities was signed to stop charging for the burial of children.

The government has pledged to make £1.5 million available between now and 2020, to support the local authorities in making the change. The move has come following a campaign by Labour MP Carolyn Harries, who lost her son Martin at the age of eight.

Plans to transform services revealed

PLANS to transform the way Powys County Council's highways, transport and recycling service operate have been unveiled.

The programme is being developed as an alternative to establishing a "wholly owned company" to deliver the services on behalf of the county council.

A commissioning board – set up to investigate the feasibility of a wholly owned company operating on behalf of the council – decided that the services would continue to be delivered in-house but would change in the way they are currently operated.

It is the intention to make the service more commercial and flexible while reducing the overall cost of running the service.

Councillor Phyl Davies, cabinet member for property and waste, and councillor Liam Fitzpatrick, cabinet member for highways, said: "We are determined to create a service that is capable of delivering services our residents want within available resources.

"We don't underestimate the scale of the programme before us but we are confident with commitment from the whole council we will transform the service.

"The transformation will take time but we are prepared to take a long-term view in order to create the sort of service we want."

Big drop in number of children arrested

Report by Lisa O'Brien

THE number of children arrested by police in West Mercia has fallen by 77 per cent since 2010, new figures have revealed.

The statistics show that the police force, which covers Shropshire, Herefordshire and Worcestershire, made 1,247 child arrests in 2016.

Black, Asian and minority ethnic children accounted for 14 per cent (175) of all child arrests by West Mercia Police last year, which was significantly below the national average of 26 per cent.

Across England and Wales, police forces made fewer than 88,000 arrests of children in total last year – down from almost 250,000 in 2010. BAME children accounted for 26 per cent of all child arrests.

The figures were obtained by the national charity Howard League for Penal Reform through a freedom of information request.

West Mercia Police Deputy Chief Constable Amanda Blakeman said: "West Mercia Police seeks to protect all members of its communities from harm and we aim to treat everyone fairly and with respect, regardless of background or age.

Allegations

"When investigating allegations involving any young person we aim to strike a careful balance between arriving at the right outcome for the victim whilst ensuring that any arrest that is made as part of the investigation is only made if it is absolutely necessary.

"The total number of arrests of children by West Mercia Police has fallen by 77 per cent since 2010 as our officers seek to ensure a proportionate approach is taken in response to allegations.

"We recognise that the police should not seek to criminalise young people unnecessarily as can be seen by the reduction in arrests we have made.

"We take the issues raised seriously and we are not complacent. We are continually looking to improve our service to our communities, including our approach to dealing with incidents involving children and young people and we will continue to strive to continuously improve and use best practice from other forces."

College staff help food bank's work

Rosemary Dorse, Matt Seife, Carol Meadows, Marie-Ann Preston and Madhukesh Loomba with donations

NORTH Shropshire College staff have been busy collecting donations for the Oswestry and Borders food bank over the festive period.

The food bank project, originally created in 2011 by members of local churches, runs from Beatrice Street in Oswestry and The Methodist Church in Ellesmere, and is aimed at preventing vulnerable people from going hungry in times of need.

The food bank relies on donations from business, local schools, churches, and the general public to ensure that it can continue to provide such a critical service, especially over the busy winter season.

Rosemary Dorse, examinations administrator at the college, who helped to organise the donations and their recent handover to the food bank, said: "We are delighted by the support that we have received from staff at the college, and would like to thank them for their contributions.

"We are grateful that we are able to give back something to the community that has supported the college over the years, and hope that we can continue to do so in the future."

For more information about courses at the college, visit the website at www.nsc.ac.uk, or call the admissions team on (01691) 688080.

Over 65s urged to have flu jabs

PUBLIC Health Wales is reminding people over the age of 65 they are at more risk of complications if they catch flu than the general population.

The organisation is promoting its campaign to make people more aware of having their flu vaccinations and have warned older people they are more likely to encounter problems if they don't have the jab.

Ann Williams from Llanfyllin, and chair of Llanfyllin Medical Practice Patient Participation Group, has added her support to this year's campaign.

She said: "I have had my free annual flu vaccination and I would encourage everyone over 65 to do the same.

"As we get older our immune system may not work as well, which makes older people more at risk of serious illness if they get flu.

"Everyone aged 65 and over can have a free annual flu vaccination from their GP practice and from participating pharmacies."

£22,000 is given to sports groups

MORE than £22,000 has been handed out to more than a dozen sport organisations across Powys.

Sport and leisure groups are being urged by Powys County Council's sports development team to apply for a grant worth up to £1,500 to help clubs thrive.

The grants are designed to make a difference to sport and physical activity locally and are available through the Sportlot Community Chest, the Sports Council for Wales National Lottery funded grant aid scheme.

Councillor Rachel Powell, cabinet member for sports development, said: "I'm delighted that we have been able to award these grants to 15 clubs, which will help them thrive and make a difference to sport and physical activity in their area.

"With £90,000 available for this financial year, I'm urging organisations to submit applications so they don't miss out on this grant funding."

End of an era as Yolande retires

THE owner of a trophy shop is set to retire at Christmas after 31 years.

Yolande Breeze has run Mid Wales Trophies off Welshpool's Broad Street for over three decades, but is now calling time.

The shop in Boot Street will be taken over by James Watkins, who runs the nearby Rally Marketing shop.

Mrs Breeze took to social media to thank her loyal customers.

She said: "After over 31 years of operating Mid Wales Trophies and Engraving I have decided it's time to retire but the good news is it will be business as usual at The Studio in Boot Street, Welshpool."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Students speak out at competition

ANOREXIA, IVF and the ethics of transplants were some of the topics explored at a public speaking competition.

Moreton Hall School at Gledrid near Oswestry hosted the Rotary Youth Speaks District Round of the national competition and saw its intermediate team progress to the district area finals.

Head of spoken English, Merriel Halsall-Williams, said: "The students all worked very hard and performed exceptionally well on the day."

"They were a great credit to themselves and should be very proud."

"The intermediate team spoke on the topic of anorexia eloquently and confidently."

"They now progress through to the district area finals on March 2 at the Catrin Finch Centre, Glyndwr University."

Youngsters have their say on future

OVER 100 young people came together from across Mid Wales to talk about their health and well-being for the future.

The 'Have Your Say Day' event took place in Llandrindod Wells on Universal Children's Day which celebrates Children's Rights across the world and promotes the improvement of child welfare. Deputy Leader of Powys County Council Aled Davies said: "It was fantastic to see so many young people from across the county come together to discuss what is important to them. It's crucial that we hear the views of young people and that these help us shape priorities and change across public services."

Memorial bench installed at hospital in honour to Woody

A FORMER maintenance assistant at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital has been remembered with a memorial bench.

Terry Wood, commonly known as Woody, started working at the hospital back in December 2005, but died in September after a battle with illness.

The estates department at the hospital decided to have a bench installed in his memory, with staff members raising £350.

In addition to that funding, electrician Rob Adams and the Peter Pan Nursery held a cake sale which raised a further £310.

Mr Wood's widow Janet, his daughter Tina Bache and his son Carl all attended the unveiling to pay tribute along with his four grandchildren – Keeley and Summer Bache and Lucas and Jaden Wood.

Mrs Bache said: "Dad would be so overwhelmed and touched on how all of his work friends have come together and remembered him in such a lovely way."

"We, as a family, will visit dad's bench and sit and think of all the wonderful memories we have of him."

Mrs Bache added: "I want to thank all of Terry's work colleagues for their kind donations that have contributed towards the beautiful bench."

"It has been so touching to know how much he meant to them all."

Estates officer Simon Everett, along with many of Mr Wood's colleagues, also paid tribute.

Simon said: "We were absolutely

Workers and family members at the dedication of the bench to Terry Wood at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital devastated to hear that Woody had passed away.

"He was such a well-loved member of the estates team who everyone across the hospital knew and valued.

"It only seemed right we remembered him somehow and when the guys in the workshop suggested a remembrance bench it was perfect."

Plea made for urgent action over broadband

ANOTHER debate on broadband speeds in Mid Wales has taken place in the National Assembly after repeated calls for improvements to be made.

Earlier this year, the National Assembly's economy, infrastructure and skills committee conducted an inquiry to consider the barriers to broadband and mobile connectivity.

It looked at the innovative steps which the Welsh Government can take to resolve ongoing connectivity issues across the country, particularly in rural Wales.

Montgomeryshire AM Russell George led the debate and believes it is essential people are not "left in the lurch" when it comes to broadband speeds.

He said: "The committee's recommendations will help Wales to develop a digital infrastructure which is fast, reliable and fit for the future so I was pleased that the Welsh Government broadly accepted our proposals. But it's now action which is required from the Government."

"Among the recommendations, the committee calls on the Welsh Government to consider ways to connect the last four per cent of Wales who remain without broadband access, and to improve mobile phone coverage across the country. While it is good news that more and more people are getting connected at increasingly high speeds, a consequence of this improvement is that a frustration and a sense of injustice grows in those left behind. It is essential that people are not left in the lurch."

Emma helps draw up new guidelines

Report by Jonny Drury

AN orthotist at Oswestry Orthopaedic Hospital is celebrating after reaching the end of a two-year project to help create guidelines that will standardise clinical practice nationally.

Emma Bonnick, senior orthotist, was one of three orthotists commissioned by the British Association of Prosthetists & Orthotists to run a series of spinal bracing surveys to reveal spinal bracing clinical practice across the UK, with the aim of improving current practices for patients.

The main findings of the study were that practice was not consistent between orthotists across the country.

Following on from this, the aim was to develop national trauma spinal bracing guidelines using evidence-based findings to give recommendations as to the type of spinal brace to use to stabilise each level and type of spinal injury.

Ms Bonnick has spent the past two years on the project, alongside Helen Walker, lead orthotist at Wirral University Teaching Hospital – formerly a member of staff – and Jonathan Tebbutt, lead orthotist at Hywel Dda – the health board for Carmarthenshire, Ceredigion and Pembrokeshire.

She said: "I feel incredibly proud that we've completed these guidelines. It's been two years of extremely hard work but I always knew how worthwhile this would be because it would mean there would be a gold standard of standardised practice and that's important because there are no guidelines currently set out to help orthotists with decision making regarding patients with spinal injuries."

As it stands the guidelines are currently going through copyrighting ahead of them being published.

Jane Dewsbury, principal orthotist, said: "I'm immensely proud of the dedication Emma has shown to helping produce these guidelines."

Councillors offer different opinions on whether 20mph zone would work in town

COUNCILLORS have clashed over whether Oswestry should be turned into a 20mph zone to prevent accidents.

In November a public meeting in Shrewsbury of a campaign called ‘20 is Plenty,’ was held.

The meeting looked at moves to turn Shropshire towns into 20mph zones.

The meeting heard representations from people around the county.

Voices from Oswestry were heard about the potential to turn the centre of the market town into a 20mph zone.

The meeting in November heard arguments for both sides.

Report by Jonny Drury

Councillor Duncan Kerr said he was a supporter of the plans.

He again backed the initiative arguing it would help keep people safe in the town.

The councillor said that also by changing zones to 20mph it would reduce pollution.

He said: “If someone is hit at 20 then they could survive, at 30 it is more likely they will die.

“This is the most cost effective way of dealing with this.

“Many people in 20mph zones have said how good it is, for health reasons as more people find it safer to walk and for the economy.”

However, Councillor Chris Schofield argued against the plans.

He said a recent story in another town in the country highlighted more accidents had been caused through the zones.

The councillor argued it was a substantial cost to change the system back.

Councillors were split on the idea, as Councillor John Price said: “It all comes down to due care and attention.

“Accidents will happen at any speed, whether that is 5mph, 20mph or 30mph.”

Shropshire Council is against the plans, the meeting was told, as were other councillors in Monday evening’s meeting.

Councillor Peter Cherrington argued that money could be used in a better way and questioned whether speeding was a particular problem in Oswestry.

He said: “We could use this money better by adding zebra crossings to slow drivers down.”

“I don’t see speeding in the town as a major problem.”

Councillors agreed to note the findings of the report, after Councillor Price added the only way to tackle speeding is by people simply using common sense.

He concluded: “We could say what about people in cars not wearing seat belts, and people driving on phones? They are problems. Signs would not make a difference, the only thing that would make a difference is common sense, but using the highway code and driving with due care and attention.”

Murder victim had ‘Gordon Ramsey’ persona, court told

Report by Aimee Jones

A DINER owner found dead with more than 40 stab wounds has been described as having a ‘Gordon Ramsey-type’ persona.

Satnam Singh Blugher, 67, was found on the kitchen floor of Tony’s Diner in Halfway House, between Shrewsbury and Welshpool, by his son on June 26 this year.

Employee Belkar Singh, who was found with £47,000 in cash belonging to the victim, denies the murder.

At Stafford Crown Court on Tuesday, a jury heard a transcript of a phone call between Singh, 56, of Booth Street, Birmingham, and fellow employee Ram Gee in which the defendant revealed Blugher had been found dead.

Singh said: “Boss is no more. He is dead. There was blood everywhere.”

Mr Gee told the jury he had no reason to suspect Singh killed their boss, who was known as “Mr B”.

Speaking through a Punjabi interpreter, he said Singh was a small and friendly man who he became good friends with, and added that the victim was known for his temper.

Mr Gee said two men had left their jobs at the diner following rows with Mr Blugher.

Jo Sidhu, defending, told the court Mr Blugher had been likened to chef Gordon Ramsey because of his anger and said he had been involved in arguments with a number of employees and other people.

The jury also heard from a former chef at Tony’s Diner, Vicky Walker, who said the victim had a disagreement with a neighbour and a builder shortly before his death.

She added: “He never shouted at me. My relationship with him was good.

“But he’d just had a disagreement with a builder who had done work for him and Mr B thought he’d been over-charged. They were disagreeing about money for further jobs he wanted doing.

“And a week before he died he spoke to the neighbours too about a row of conifer trees. He thought they should cut them but I just told him to speak to the council about it.”

The businessman was found by his son Hardeep on the kitchen floor on the afternoon of June 26 after concerns that no one had seen him. He had been stabbed and struck up to 50 times.

The prosecution alleges that Singh was motivated by greed and attacked the victim for money.

The trial continues.

Planned £18 million revamp of HQ wins backing

Shropshire Council’s dated Shirehall base in Shrewsbury is set to be in line for an £18 million renovation under new plans

WORK to renovate Shropshire Council’s headquarters could begin as early as the spring.

Members of the council’s cabinet agreed in principle to the £18.7 million refurbishment of the outdated Shirehall in Shrewsbury.

Due diligence and a feasibility study will now be carried out – at a cost to the council of £300,000 although it has been awarded £150,000 from the Government for the scheme.

The council had considered vacating the site and relocating and rebuilding elsewhere but the costs were deemed to be too high.

It had also looked into the partial renovation of the building but is was felt this did not address a number of issues including heating, energy wastage and the building being unattractive to potential partners and external companies who may otherwise take up office space and thereby generate income.

Leader of the council, Councillor Peter Nutting, said he hoped the renovation work of the 1960s building, which he described as “tired”, would be at the forefront of moving the council in to a “new world”.

According to Tim Smith, head of the council’s business initiatives and commercial services, the work, which could start as early as May, would take three years to complete. On completion there would be open plan work spaces, hot desking, and spaces which could be rented out to businesses or partners.

Councillor Nutting said that it is estimated that by attracting private and commercial partners to the refurbished building, the council would be able to generate approximately £2 million in revenue per year.

At the cabinet meeting, Councillor Roger Evans, Lib Dem leader of the opposition, said he was in favour of the renovations, adding: “I have long advocated for this. We should invest in this building. It will improve our finances and revenue.”

‘Our finances are under control’ says council leader

SHROPSHIRE Council’s leader Peter Nutting has reassured councillors that finances are under control, after they were branded “a catastrophe”.

The authority has predicted that there will be a £5 million overspend this financial year, and as a result the council’s cabinet voted to take action to tackle this, which includes a “spending freeze”.

Liberal Democrat leader Roger Evans labelled the financial state “a catastrophe” and said he was concerned that the financial strategy would not be debated until January. But Councillor Nutting has reassured councillors that savings have been, and continue to be, made.

In a reply to a written question from Councillor David Turner ahead of a full council meeting, he said: “The fundamental principles and underlying trends identified in the financial strategy have been consistent for a number of years. Savings have been, and continue to be, made and earmarked reserves have been freed up to protect, as far as possible, services that are so valuable to our communities. The financial strategy comprises of projections which are refreshed and reviewed on a regular basis and reported, transparently, through to cabinet and council.”

Councillor Nutting said that increased demand for social care, along with falling Government funding, have resulted in the funding gap.

But he insisted the council was taking action to address it. He said: “Increased demand for social care in children and adults alongside other pressures have escalated costs, and with falling Government funding have increased the projected funding gap.

“As reported in the media, this is consistent with national trends and so this is not isolated to Shropshire.

“The issue of expenditure exceeding income remains and this cannot be sustained by ‘one off’ measures. We have been clear about this in the financial strategy and we have set out our approach to tackle this over the coming months. In short, we are taking action to address this.”

Mayor hoping for movement on site plans

OSWESTRY’S mayor is calling on sites for two major developments to move forward.

Plans were previously in place for a retail park with a supermarket, cinema and restaurants on the former Smithfield site in Oswestry, however it has stood derelict for many years after plans were shelved.

Morrisons has a lease on the site, however it became an eyesore until the town council demanded action was taken by the supermarket chain, and it was tidied up this year.

Also plans have been long running for an Innovation Park at the town’s Mile End roundabout, which could bring around 1,000 jobs.

Mayor Vince Hunt is hoping that things kick into action with both developments.

He said: “It goes without saying that we all want something to happen on both sides.

“We’ve had a little bit of movement this year and dialogue with Morrisons to get them to do something about the site. We have been in further contact and we would like to hope something happens next year.

“The Innovation Park is the same really, we hope something happens because it is massive for Oswestry and could bring thousands of jobs.

“It is just we are hopeful on both counts for the next year.”

Businesses are reminded of waste rules

COUNCIL bosses are warning businesses they could face prosecution if they fail to follow commercial waste rules properly.

The reminder comes after failing to dispose of commercial waste properly cost a Welshpool business over £550 after it was prosecuted by Powys County Council.

Julia Cork, operator of Sun Kissed Salon in Welshpool, pleaded guilty to breaching Section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act for failing to produce waste transfer notes. Magistrates heard that the council’s waste enforcement officers started an investigation after they found waste disposed of inappropriately in Welshpool in January with evidence linking the waste to Sun Kissed Salon. The salon was issued with a legal notice from the council requesting written evidence to prove how they were disposing their waste.

However, they were unable to produce the relevant documentation. Cllr Phyl Davies, cabinet member for waste and recycling, said: “Any waste or recycling produced by businesses is classed as commercial and they have a legal duty of care to store, transport and dispose of their commercial waste in a professional manner. It is not acceptable to illegally use the household service or worse to fly-tip the waste.

Police have new lead on tool fraud

OFFICERS leading an investigation into suspected factory tool fraud have revealed that one person has come forward following their appeal for information.

Businesses in Oswestry, Telford, Shrewsbury and Bridgnorth have reported being charged thousands of pounds for machine tools to be sharpened after being approached by two men offering the service.

They visited the Lindstrand Balloon factory in Oswestry offering to sharpen drill bits before returning the next day demanding cash. When the company refused to pay, the pair began hounding staff members by phone. Bosses at Baumat UK Ltd factory in Telford were charged £6,000 by two men who had initially offered to sharpen its precision tools for between £600 to £700.

The firm found the bill went up when the work was completed. The men were eventually paid £2,000 but the firm claimed it was bombarded with telephone calls from them demanding the rest of the cash. The same men are suspected to have visited several businesses in the north east sparking a hunt for those responsible. In a statement Humberside Police said: “This remains an ongoing inquiry at present. We have had someone come forward following the appeal and are pursuing further lines of inquiry.”

MP welcomes latest figures on employment

Oswestry & Border Chronicle Thursday, December 21, 2017

GLYN Davies, Conservative MP for Montgomeryshire, has welcomed the latest unemployment figures for the county, continuing the record levels of employment within the constituency.

The Office of National Statistics released figures which show that in November, the number of claimant's for Job Seekers Allowance in Montgomeryshire was 305. This represents just one per cent of the economically active population aged 16-64, well below the UK average claimant rate of 2.5 per cent. The number of claimants is down from 335 in October 2017, and is 75 lower than in November 2016.

There were also only 75 claimants aged 18-24 within the constituency, 25 lower than in November 2016.

Glyn Davies said: "The latest unemployment statistics for Montgomeryshire continue the record levels of employment within the constituency. The employment rate is staggeringly high, and is far higher than when I first became Montgomeryshire MP in 2010.

"Today, Montgomeryshire has the 73rd highest level of employment out of 650 constituencies across the UK. What's even more pleasing is that unemployment for those aged between 18-24 also continues to decrease, having fallen by a third from this time last year."

Changes to parking rules are mooted

A COUNCIL is considering moves to ensuring parking charges have a "consistent approach" across the county.

A report went before Powys County Council's cabinet, discussing changes to parking permits, dispensations, suspensions and fees.

It is proposed to have replacement permits made across the county with a charge of £25. The report also suggested adopting a charge of £15 per vehicle per day up to a maximum of two vehicles at any one time in council car parks.

Another proposed change is to have a charge of £330 to cover the consideration and creating and erecting of temporary parking suspension signs – including any site visits as necessary. Long stay car parks will also be hired out to assist an event, and will be set at the average daily income of the car park, plus an administration fee of £75. In addition to charging the daily rate for car per space in compounds, a £75 administration fee will also be payable.

The move is designed to give a consistent approach to parking across the county. It was recommended that the changes should be approved. However, the cabinet heard the report had not been seen by the scrutiny committee, and a decision was made to defer the report.

Deficit may take decade to clear

HEALTH bosses say it could be a decade before they manage to clear a £32.6 million deficit.

A finance and contract report was published ahead of Shropshire Clinical Commissioning Group's (CCG) governing body meeting, which states that by the end of this financial year the CCG will have a £19.4 million-in-year deficit.

The report says this totals a deficit of £32.6 million which has accumulated over previous years.

Shropshire CCG's accountable officer Simon Freeman said that the group hopes that the in-year deficit will be zero in three years. He said: "Our plan this year is to deliver our services. Our real focus is on returning the CCG to balance in year. We're having to save £18 million this year.

"We've got a number of major schemes to look at to save that money, one is GP prescriptions."

Dr Freeman added: "It's about cutting out waste, stopping prescribing things we don't need to prescribe.

"That's going to save approximately £3-4 million this year.

"By three years we're hoping our in-year deficit will be zero.

"It could be a decade before the £32.6 million is cleared."

Time running out for sports organisations to claim a share of cash fund from housing group

YOUNG sporting individuals and clubs in the region are being urged to enter a funding scheme that gives them the chance to win £200,000 as the programme closes at the end of the year.

Persimmon Homes launched its Healthy Communities scheme in May.

Launched

The scheme was launched as part of a national initiative which aims to give away more than £600,000 in cash to sports groups and individuals.

Under the scheme, a host of regional prizes of £750 are up for grabs every month, with amateur sports teams and individuals aged 21 years and under eligible to apply.

Report by Jonny Drury

The money is to be spent on sports kit, equipment, coaching or facilities.

The scheme will close at the end of December with a shortlist of 30 drawn up in January from all the entries nationwide.

They will go forward to a national final to be decided on a public vote, with the winning club or individual receiving £200,000 while two runners-up will receive £50,000 each with 27 finalist awards of £5,000 each.

Persimmon Homes West Midlands, which has its headquarters in Wolverhampton, has chosen individuals and clubs from across their region, which covers Shropshire, Staffordshire and the West Midlands, including Shrewsbury Juniors Under 14 girls, Gornal Athletic Mini Minor Kickers, a Stourbridge archer and a Cheadle trampolinist.

Director-in-charge Stephen Cleveley is now urging people to apply as there are only a few weeks left until the scheme closes.

He said: "Healthy Communities has been tremendously popular, and we have had some incredibly talented young people enter as well as dedicated clubs providing grassroots sport and opportunities for local people.

"This new programme is aimed at creating a lasting legacy for young people who love sport and the volunteers who help to deliver it.

"Everyone, regardless of whether they win a monthly prize, will be considered as a finalist.

"We are looking for sports teams and individuals who have amazing ideas on how to spend £200,000 to come forward.

"We will consider anything from new club-houses, to training centres, facilities or gyms, or it may be people who want to spend the cash on the development of future Olympians.

Excited

"We're very excited to see the projects that are put forward."

Healthy Communities is in addition to the £720,000 Persimmon Homes already donates through its hugely successful Community Champions programme each year.

A&E targets are 'nowhere near where we want them'

Report by Mat Growcott

THE trust in charge of Shropshire's major hospitals has admitted its A&E performance "is nowhere near where we want it" after figures revealed waiting times were the second worst in the country for October.

Figures showed that only 73.3 per cent of patients at Shrewsbury & Telford Hospital NHS Trust's A&E departments had been seen within four hours – below the national target of 95 per cent and national average of 90 per cent.

In light of the figures bosses at the trust, which manages Royal Shrewsbury Hospital and Princess Royal Hospital Telford, have said that their top priority was to ensure patients were treated "safely and appropriately".

Sara Biffen, interim chief operating officer for the trust, said A&E departments at both the Royal Shrewsbury Hospital and at Telford's Princess Royal Hospital were "under a great deal of pressure".

The figures come against the background of the trust's management arguing that proceeding with the Future Fit reorganisation of the hospitals is the best way to tackle the challenges faced by the organisation.

Ms Biffen advised those with minor illness or injuries to consider whether they really need to visit hospital.

"We know that our performance against the A&E target is nowhere near where we want it to be, but our first priority is to ensure our patients are treated safely and appropriately," she said.

"As we have said on many occasions, our A&E departments are under a great deal of pressure, dealing with increasing attendances and more and more complex conditions, such as respiratory problems, which mean more people are being admitted into our hospitals.

"We continue to work with our partners both in the NHS and in social care so that those patients who no longer need the specialist care we provide can leave our hospitals in a safe and timely manner."

Ms Biffen said there were more appropriate health services for those not suffering with conditions appropriate for A&E.

"We would ask people to think carefully before coming to A&E," she said.

"People suffering from minor illness or injuries can access more appropriate health services, allowing us to focus on those people with serious conditions."

Spot castle hidden among the picturesque hills

THE grand structure of Chirk Castle was captured from a different perspective by a photographer recently.

The castle near the North Wales town was photographed by walking blogger and photographer Clive Potter on a recent visit to the area. He photographed the castle from above the site of the Battle of Crogen, which took place in 1165 in the Ceiriog Valley.

The battle saw the forces of Henry II of England take on an alliance of Welsh princes led by Owain Gwynedd.

The Welsh side came out on top, and some sources reported that the adverse weather conditions played a major part in Henry II's defeat.

Mr Potter visited the grounds of the battle to take the long distance picture of the castle.

Theatre will be staging extra pantomime performances

THEATRE bosses have scheduled two extra performances of their hit show, Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs on January 3 and 4 after disgruntled panto ticket holders were not able to attend due to the weather.

A number of people, including some from the Oswestry area, took the decision not to go to the afternoon and evening performances of the sell-out show at Shrewsbury's Theatre Severn on December 10 due to heavy snowfall.

But the shows went ahead – with more than 600 people enjoying both performances.

Craig Reeves, Theatre Severn spokesman said: "We are pleased to confirm that two additional performances have now been scheduled to accommodate ticket-holders who were unable to attend due to adverse weather conditions.

"Following the decision to proceed with performances for those who could attend, Theatre Severn and Evolution Productions also began to explore options for those who may be unable to do so.

"Due to very limited availability on forthcoming performances, we were unable to offer immediate ticket exchanges, and quickly prioritised discussions around scheduling extra performances.

"With much to discuss and resolve during a developing situation, we regret that we were not able to speculate publicly upon potential solutions for those ticketholders at an earlier stage.

"After exploring all options, additional performances have now been scheduled for 1pm on January 3 and 4."

"All ticketholders who were unable to attend will receive further advice directly regarding potential exchanges to those additional performances, or next year's pantomime Mother Goose. We are continuing to contact schools and other ticketholders affected by recent weather conditions. Schools will be offered refunds or exchanges to Mother Goose.

"We also hope to confirm a rescheduled screening of Oscar Wilde's 'A Woman of No Importance' in due course. We will contact those ticketholders when we have further information."

From comedy to classics, we pick 12 of the must-see television shows due to hit your screens this Christmas

As twinkly Christmas trees from the traditional to the twig-like pop up in homes across the UK, the next festive treat to look forward to is finding out what will be on the box over the festive period.

Soaps, Christmas specials, the Queen's speech and films galore – the TV schedules for Christmas are packed with things to tempt you, as the channels vie for your attention.

Nearly half the shows airing on the BBC's two main channels this Yuletide will again be repeats.

Old comedy favourites including Dad's Army, The Two Ronnies and Morecambe and Wise, will help to fill the festive schedules.

Dad's Army will be on BBC2 on Christmas Eve and Christmas Day. The channel will also show the 1977 Morecambe and Wise Christmas show, featuring Angela Rippon dancing – on the 25th.

BBC1's Christmas Day offerings once again include Doctor Who, featuring the much anticipated new Doctor Jodie Whittaker as Peter Capaldi steps down.

Immediately after this, our favourite amateur dancers and former contestants put their best foot forward in Strictly Come Dancing.

Holidays

And the feel-good factor continues straight after that Christmas special with a visit by the Call the Midwife Christmas special, which sees London's East End coated in snow.

ITV brings us a two-hour Victoria special on Christmas Day featuring The Queen and husband Prince Albert enjoying a wintry Christmas at Buckingham Palace, while everyone's favourite Liverpoolian Paul O'Grady's For The Love of Dogs at Christmas visits the Battersea Cats and Dogs Home to give us paws for thought, about our four-legged friends still without a home for the holidays.

Before these shows on ITV we'll be able to enjoy the ultimate Christmas movie, Santa Claus The Movie in the early afternoon, followed by The Queen's Christmas Broadcast at 3pm.

There will be so much to switch on to over the holidays it will imperative to plan your viewing with military precision!

To help kick off your choices, check out our 12 of the best of what's on the box over the festive period:-

LITTLE WOMEN

(Boxing Day, BBC1, 8pm; Wednesday December 27, 8pm; Thursday December 28, 8.30pm)

Louisa May Alcott's classic, in this lavish adaptation the March sisters confront growing pains, financial shortages, family tragedies and romantic rivalries in mid-19th-century Massachusetts.

Jo struggles for independence and sometimes clashes with her beloved mother and her sisters Meg, Amy and Beth. She also contends with their cranky Aunt March, their impulsive neighbour Laurie and kindly linguistics professor Friedrich Bhaer.

This marvellous story has been adapted

It will be a bitter sweet Christmas for Peter Capaldi, as he regenerates into the 13th doctor – and a female at that!

by the great Heidi Thomas. The Call the Midwife creator has enlisted the likes of Angela Lansbury, Michael Gambon and Emily Watson to star in this take which is set against the backdrop of the American Civil War.

DOCTOR WHO

(Christmas Day, BBC1, 5.30pm)

It will probably be a bitter sweet Christmas for the superb Peter Capaldi, as he watches himself regenerate from the 12th doctor to the 13th – and a female at that! Good Lord.

And of course SHE gets a new Tardis and costume. It's only fair that, she is a woman. Jodie Whittaker will mark an incredibly exciting new chapter in the show's history. This special will guest-star Mark Gatiss as a First World War soldier, named "The Captain", and will be Pearl Mackie's final episode as companion Bill Potts.

SNOW BEARS

(Boxing Day, BBC1, 6.30pm)

Packed with the ooh and ah factor, this lovely film features teeny-weeny polar bear cubs. Guaranteed to turn the hardest of hearts into pure mush, you won't be able to help falling for these small furry fellows, just by seeing their tiny little paws and noses.

And of course how their mother gently cares for her babies will resonate with good mothers everywhere.

This is an offering entirely centred solely on the story of two cubs sand their mother as they battle the odds to travel 400 miles in search of seal-rich pack ice at the North Pole.

VICTORIA

(Christmas Day, ITV, 7pm)

With Prince Albert having been widely recognised for inventing Christmas as we know it, many fans will be ensuring they don't miss this two-hour Christmas special.

We return to Buckingham Palace, where the young queen (Jenna Coleman) is feeling gloomy. Of course it is up to Albert (Tom Hughes) to spread a little festive cheer and magic, by turning their home into a wonderland. But he infuriates his wife by inviting two unwelcome guests, her awful mother and Uncle Leopold. Oh dear ...

MARY, MEL AND SUE'S SURPRISE PARTY

(Christmas Eve, BBC1, time)

Even though Channel 4's version of The Great British Bake Off has turned out to be pleasantly enjoyable, it is still good here to see Mary, Mel and Sue reunited – although it's just a one-off and not related to Bake Off at all.

An unusual mix, it is like a mix of DIY SOS and Noel's Christmas Presents.

The trio visit a community in south Wales that's had a bit of a tough time of it, trying to sprinkle a touch of festive magic.

SOAP OPERA GUIDE

Carla Connor returns to Coronation Street

As you gleefully rub your hands together at the thought of all that lovely Christmas grub on the table and great gifts under the tree, don't forget to look forward to another treat to come - the Yuletide soaps. Just what has Coronation Street, EastEnders and Emmerdale got planned for their big story lines this year, as soaps typically go huge for Christmas?

So grab a mince pie, pour your first mulled wine of the year and settle down in front of your roaring winter fire to enjoy this preview.

CORONATION STREET

Also in the soaps this Christmas, in Coronation Street Peter threatens to kill Billy, Carla returns with a secret, Luke is in danger from Phelan, Sinead has doubts about the wedding.

If that isn't enough, Rana vows to tell Zeedan about Kate and Bethany agrees to a relationship with Craig. The big story line is Coronation Street's Carla Connor setting tongues wagging by sticking to soft drinks when she returns to the cobbles.

When this becomes a repeated occurrence for Carla over the holidays, speculation naturally begins over why she's not knocking back the wine like she usually would be.

Although loyal friend Roy is respecting Carla's wishes, his mood sours on New Year's Eve when he thinks he spots her drinking at the Bistro.

The mystery takes another twist when Roy Cropper (David Neilson) returns from a holiday in the Lake District earlier than planned, wanting to see Carla after hearing that she's back in town.

It's clear that Carla has already been confiding in Roy way before her return to the Street, as she begs him to keep her secret now that she's back. Roy begs Carla to move in with him rather than returning to Devon.

EASTENDERS

The voicemail that Jane Beale left for Stacey as she departed Walford - in which she told how Max caused Steven's death and left her to die - has so far gone unheard, due to the phone being stolen by young Riley Taylor. But when the device is returned, Max is left exposed.

He is currently a social pariah due to his dealing with Willmott-Brown, and his only friend is Stacey, who has let him stay at the Fowlers'.

But her patience wears thin on Christmas Eve, when he lies to get her alone.

Meanwhile, Karen finds Riley and Chatham's stash of stolen phones, and tells Keegan to return Stacey's.

Max is delighted when his daughter Abi joins him for lunch on Christmas Day, but Stacey's phone is a ticking time bomb.

What will happen when it explodes?

Viewers will have to wait and see whether Stacey checks her phone and whether she'll discover the truth. This comes as Max and Stacey are set for a showdown, after he causes chaos with her husband Martin Fowler.

EMMERDALE

Robert has a surreal Christmas Day, Aaron and Alex share a passionate kiss, Debbie is betrayed by Tom, Cain tells Moira he loves her and the Dingles plot to stop the golf course development.

Robert and Aaron's relationship takes centre stage for a special Christmas Day episode when Robert wakes up in confusion and finds himself reliving the same day over and over again - think Groundhog Day mixed with A Christmas Carol and you'll get the idea!

As Robert's day gets progressively stranger, all is not quite as it seems but will the scheming Sugden, who is gutted to have lost the love of his life, Aaron, learn anything as he's forced to go over things again and again in a perpetual nightmare?

And could this be the wake-up call he needs to reunite with the only man he's ever truly wanted?

Meanwhile, when he tries to give the Whites a present for his son, baby Seb, they're not impressed. Can outcast Rob turn things around or are all his ruined relationships beyond repair?

GRANDPA'S GREAT ESCAPE

(New Year's Day, BBC1, 6.55pm)
A man of many talents, David Walliams can name being a bestselling author as one of his many bows. Here are two of his new tales.

In Grandpa's Great Escape, Grandpa (Tom Courtney) is a former wartime flying ace who now has dementia. He ends up moving into an old folk's home, Twilight Towers, run by the sinister and conniving Miss Dandy (Jennifer Saunders).

In Ratburger, (Christmas Eve, Sky 1, 6pm) we hear the story of Zoe, a girl with a stepmother (Sheridan Smith), who can't abide her and a dad who is never around.

CALL THE MIDWIFE

(Christmas Day, BBC1, 7.40pm)

A Christmas Day staple, it's 1963 and Poplar is blanketed by snow in the coldest winter for 300 years. Brrrrrr. Blizzards, brutal low temperatures, power cuts, road closures and frozen pipes come to test the patience of the saintly nuns and midwives.

Val helps a young couple, newly arrived in London, as the mum goes through a traumatic birth, while Sister Julianne struggles to reunite a family.

ERIC, ERNIE & ME

(Friday, December 29, BBC4, 9pm)

Neil Forsyth's drama focuses on Eric and Ernie's scriptwriter Eddie Braben, who became a star in his own right, particularly after all of those brilliant Christmas shows.

Stephen Tompkinson plays Braben as he takes the duo to hitherto unimaginable heights of TV success, culminating in the 1977 Christmas show - the one with Elton John.

Mark Bonnar, of Unforgotten, plays Eric

Morecambe, while Neil Maskell, of Humans fame, is Ernie Wise.

MCMAFIA

(New Year's Day, BBC1, 9pm; Tuesday January 2, BBC1, 9pm)

You can be forgiven for being very exited about this adaptation of journalist Misha Glenny's bestseller McMafia - a look at the far-reaching effects of global crime.

The wonderful James Norton, of Granchester and War and Peace, takes the lead in this menacing crime drama. He plays Alex Godman, the English-raised son of Russian exiles with a Mafia past, whom Alex has spent his whole life trying to escape from. He has built up a legitimate business with his girlfriend, Rebecca. However, he is then drawn into a world of money laundering, ruthless intelligence agencies and corrupt politicians.

THE MINIATURIST

(Boxing Day, BBC1, 9pm; Wednesday December 27, BBC1, 9pm)

Set in 1686, the story begins with young Nella Oortman who - after an arranged marriage - arrives in Amsterdam to begin her new life as the wife of wealthy merchant Johannes Brandt.

She is met by Johannes' cold and unwelcoming sister Marin. And when Johannes does appear, he only presents her with an unusual wedding gift: a doll's house replica of their home. So she tracks down the elusive "miniaturist" to furnish this giant cabinet. As her own house starts to reveal its secrets, so does her doll's house.

CAROLS FROM KING'S

(Christmas Eve, BBC2, 5.45pm)

We obviously cannot miss out this wonderful annual oasis of light in the darkness at Christmas time. After a year scarred by atrocity after atrocity, both here and abroad, this beautiful service brings time for peaceful reflection.

Whether you are religious or not, this offering will give you time to pause amid all the Christmas Eve preparations to mull over the things that really matter.

No paper, no worries!

THE BIG DAY IS ON ITS WAY, YOU'VE ALREADY BOUGHT YOUR CHRISTMAS GIFTS BUT THERE'S NO WRAPPING PAPER TO BE FOUND ANYWHERE.

But never fear, here are some crafty creations that will personalise your presents, whilst being super savvy and recycling materials to help save the world too! Each material chosen can be re-used, recycled or re-worn meaning you can get on with enjoying the rest of your Christmas day and eating enough food for a small village without worrying about all that tidying up.

Brown Paper

A classic combination of brown paper and ribbon is a traditional trend that is always a popular choice when it comes to gift wrapping.

Tissue Paper

Use patterned tissue paper or create your own with homemade stamps for a simple and cost effective way to wrap your gifts. This lightweight material is great for adding a personalised touch.

Brown paper chic

Tinfoil

Not the most traditional of materials this one is a little bit out there and requires a bit of imagination. Simply wrap your gift in tinfoil and then embellish with a beautiful ribbon or some string in a bright colour to make it pop.

Newspaper

A cheap way to get an old fashioned feel. For an extra special touch why not use a special dated newspaper or one with a puzzle on to complete for anyone who likes a brainteaser.

Scarves

Using scarves adds texture and a warm wintery feel under the Christmas tree. Add a matching ribbon and tie in a bow to hold the present together. This also gives the recipient another special gift that they wouldn't have expected.

Tea Towels

For nick nacks or small items, pop them into a cardboard tube that you can then wrap in a festive tea towel. Then twist and secure the ends with ribbon or tape to form a cracker like parcel. This way they'll never be able to guess what you have bought them either.

Wallpaper

Use printed wallpaper samples or leftover clippings for a creative way to wrap up your gifts this Christmas. Finish with textured string or metallic ribbon for a modern twist. Available in a wide range of colours, patterns and textures you can personalise each one to suit the recipient.

Crepaper

For a rustic approach to wrapping crepe paper is a quick and easy way to wrap up presents but still make them look a little bit different. Crinkle or rouche the paper for an extra bit of texture and finish with a bow.

Now you've got the presents wrapped, make sure your tree is a seasonal stunner this year...

1. Create a snowy scene

A frosted tree can create the look of an Alpine sanctuary, and white, silver, and clear glass decorations will add to that feeling of being a sparkling, snowy wonderland.

2. Look for Eastern inspiration

Shake up your style and opt for an exciting, adventurous look, with an Eastern flavour and baubles that in a riot of colour, particularly turquoise, orange, fuschia pink and red.

3. Pair burnished gold with brilliant blue

Sapphire blue – so fashionable in decor – and glowing gold conjures a luxurious, decadent effect.

Creating a contemporary Christmas allows you to think outside the box in terms of decorations - choose geometric-shaped baubles over traditional spheres, or go even further with elegant butterfly clips attached to tree branches and dazzling glittered tree-toppers.

4. Return to tradition

For a classic Christmas, deep forest greens and rich reds are the cornerstone, enhanced by iconic baubles featuring Santas and sleighs.

"Classic red and green is enduringly popular," says Stephen Evans, managing director at Christmas Tree World. "You can keep it simple with touches of white, or make it look more regal with hints of gold.

"This look keys into all the feel-good factors of the season – warmth, nostalgia and familiarity. Coordinate your gift wrapping so the presents under the tree complement the look, and it'll be picture perfect in no time."

10 WEIRD AND WONDERFUL CHRISTMAS TRADITIONS ACROSS EUROPE

Christmas is not the same for everyone around the world! We have gathered 10 weird and wonderful Christmas traditions across Europe that may surprise you....

Potatoes for children in Iceland

Every night, for the 13 nights up till Christmas – Children in Iceland leave their shoes windowsill for troll-like creatures called Yule Lads to fill them with toys and sweets. Naughty children will be met with a potato.

Christmas trees decorated with spider webs in Ukraine

A poor widow and her children couldn't afford to decorate their tree – so spiders did it for them! To this day, Ukrainians honour the Legend of the Christmas Spider and add fake spiders and webs to their trees as decorations.

A fish in the tub?

Don't lift a finger in Lithuania and Poland

Before the big feast on Christmas Eve, everyone must chip in to clean the entire house – but Christmas Day is a strict day of rest and relaxation – even the cooking is done in advance!

Quick – hide the broom! In Norway

Norwegians hide their brooms to stop witches and evil spirits from stealing them and haunting the skies on Christmas Eve.

If it sticks in Slovakia

Before Slovaks sit down to their Christmas meal, the man of house throws loska (a kind of pudding) at the ceiling – if it sticks, it's a sign that it'll be a good year.

No eating until a star appears in Poland

In Poland, they don't begin eating until the first star appears – but when they do, they really go for it, with a 12-course meal that includes beetroot soup and herring.

Something fishy in Slovakia

Carp is the traditional Christmas dish here – some people keep a fish as a guest in their bathtub before killing it and cooking it on Christmas morning!

Pickle your fancy in Germany

Legend has it that, on the night before Christmas, Germans hide a pickle somewhere in the tree – the first child to find it in the morning gets a prize.

You've got to earn it in Latvia

Children open their presents beside the tree. But before they tear off the paper, they might have to recite a poem, sing a song or perform a dance.

Men do the cooking in Greenland

Traditionally, Christmas is the day the men do the cooking, while the women sit back and relax. The menu? A delicacy called Kiviak (seal skin, stuffed with dead birds and fermented for 7 months).

Top tips for house guests

Don't outstay your welcome at others' homes

INVITING GUESTS INTO YOUR HOME IS PART AND PARCEL OF CELEBRATING CHRISTMAS, BUT WITH DIFFERENT GENERATIONS OF FAMILY AND FRIENDS GATHERING TOGETHER, IT'S OFTEN DIFFICULT TO ESTABLISH ACCEPTABLE GUEST BEHAVIOUR.

Anglian Home Improvements, the windows, doors and conservatories specialist, surveyed over 1,000 UK residents to uncover what we're willing to do in another person's house and what we find rude if guests do in our own.

The results show running a bath without asking, breaking the toilet seat and being sick in the garden are some of the inappropriate things guests have done in their host's house.

When it comes to guest etiquette, the survey revealed that hosts find feet on the furniture a top issue (59%), cutting nails a close second (58%) and taking control of the TV remote (52%) takes the third position in the poll.

Asking for the wi-fi password topped the list of things we're happy to do as a guest, with almost a third (31%) of survey respondents stating they would feel comfortable asking for the code as a guest in someone's home.

No hogging the remote

This was followed by being comfortable asking to charge a phone, tablet or laptop (24%) coming in second place, and helping yourself to a drink (20%).

Over half of men (59%) said guests cutting their nails in their home is one of the rudest activities, whereas women said that someone putting their feet on the furniture is the worst thing a guest could do in their home (62%).

To help you be a golden guest over the festive period, here are 10 tips for being the perfect Christmas guest:

1. Show up with a gift for every member of the party
2. Offer to help on Christmas day with washing dishes or cooking dinner
3. Ask if there is anything you can bring along, for example alcohol or food
4. Work out what the clothing attire is before attending
5. Make sure you RSVP so they know how many people to cater for
6. Send a thank you note or message to appreciate their hospitality
7. Make sure it's clear how long you're staying – don't overstay your welcome
8. Don't criticise the way they cook or their Christmas traditions
9. Don't sit glued to your phone – pay attention to your hosts
10. Be mindful of how much you drink

Be a helping hand

Melanie McDonald, head of PR and brand marketing at Anglian Home Improvements, said: "Christmas is a stressful time for those who are hosting, making it even more important to remember your guest etiquette. Being a polite and helpful guest will help to prevent a stressful environment and ensure that everyone gets into the Christmas spirit. Generations gathering together over the festive season can cause some to be offended by modern habits, so make sure to turn your phone on silent and remember your please and thank yous!

"To navigate through the confusing world of modern etiquette, this helpful guide on what is expected in a modern household and what behaviour will mean you are sure to not be invited back!"

Are you Noel or Scrooge?

IS SHROPSHIRE HOME TO THE MOST CHRISTMASSY PERSON IN THE UK?

A new study carried out by the British Christmas Tree Growers Association has found that Shrewsbury is a hotspot for the surname Noel – French for Christmas.

It is also home to more people called Stocking than anywhere else in the UK.

Meanwhile, people called Christmas hark from Cambridgeshire, those named Rudolph from Kent, Santa's live in Scotland and all three wise men – Balthazar, Melchior and Caspar – can be found in Bedfordshire.

BCTGA has used national data to find the number of people in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland with obvious Christmas surnames.

It has also mapped the hot spots for these surnames around the country.

FUN FACTS

There are 2,417 people with the surname Christmas in the UK.

The first recording of the Christmas name was Ralph Christemas of Suffolk in 1191.

There is only one Mr Scrooge in the whole world and he lives in Canada.

Meanwhile, there are 228 people worldwide called Grinch and 16 of these live in England.

There is only one person in the UK called Baubles.

Fairies live in Canada.

There are five Mr Christmastrees worldwide – but none in the UK.

The surname Holly originates in Norfolk.

The first time Angel can be found listed as a surname was in Hadleigh, Suffolk, in 1591.

While the majority of Santas live in Moray, Scotland, those called Claus are more likely to live in Huddersfield, West Yorkshire.

There are 38 people in the UK with the surname Hoho but sadly, none called Hohoho.

The Three Wise men – Balthazar, Melchior and Caspar – may well be friends. Research suggests there are people with all three surnames living in Bedfordshire.

Jesus is alive and well in Cumbrria but unlikely to be related by blood to the Messiah.

CHRISTMAS TIPPLES: KNOW YOUR STUFF

If you're cracking open a bottle or two for Christmas, here's a wine glossary of some of the most common wine terms and what they mean.

Wine experts, sommeliers and retailers love to tell us about the wines we should be drinking and enjoying, but what about their wine-tasting notes? Here's our handy guide:

1. Acidity Good acidity brings crispness to the wine and the right level of acidity stops it from being too sweet or watery.

2. Aftertaste The flavour that lingers in the mouth.

3. Aperitif If a wine is described as a good aperitif, it's best enjoyed as a pre-dinner drink rather than with the meal.

4. Balance When a wine is beautifully balanced, the flavour, acidity, tannins and body enhance each other.

5. Brut The driest style of sparkling wine with a tiny amount of sugar, while Brut Nature (sometimes referred to as skinny champagne) is a very dry style of fizz without any sugar added at the dosage stage.

6. Dosage The amount of sugar added to a bottle of fermented sparkling wine after the sediments and dead yeast cells are removed, and before corking, hence a bottle of bubbly might be 'low dosage.'

7. Earthy Some reds are described as earthy (usually positive) which refers to the dryness in the mouth, and is associated with the soil where the grapes were grown.

8. Flabby A trendy word for a wine when it's watery with little or no acidity, and one that should be left on the shelf.

9. Fleshy This is a good word and one we like. It means the wine has ample fruit, texture and body.

10. Herbaceous If you love a vibrant New Zealand sauvignon blanc, a good style will be deliciously herbaceous, with well-balanced flavours and hints of herbs.

Polished and party-ready

WE'VE GOT FOUR EASY BUT EFFECTIVE WAYS TO TAP INTO THE SEASON'S MANI MOOD.

After season upon season of nude and neutral polishes ruling the runways, nail art is well and truly back on the beauty map for AW17.

Backstage at the autumn/winter shows, nail technicians got creative with colour, played around with patterns, and even – at Marc Jacobs and Balenciaga – painted tiny logos onto models' nails (yep, the Nineties effect is still in full force). But you don't have to be a master manicurist to copy these looks. We've got four easy-peasy – but very pretty – ways to nail this talon trend...

1. Marc Jacobs' half and half nails

While some models had little MJ monogram manis, others were given a beautiful combination of deep burgundy and dark gold split on the diagonal to complement the Seventies-inspired collection. Recreate the look by starting with a coat of Nailberry Dial M for Maroon and then, after letting it dry, using a small strip of masking tape to create a diagonal section and painting Ciate Goal Digger over the top.

Nailberry Dial M for Maroon, £14.50 (nailberry.co.uk); Ciate Goal Digger, £9 (ciatelondon.com).

2. Sophia Webster's frosted French mani

"Frosted tips" doesn't just mean the terrible Nineties hair trend - it's also the Sophia Webster AW17 sparkly nail look, inspired by the show's ice queen theme, and it's rather enchanting. Lead nail technician Rebecca Jade Wilson created the look by starting with a base of Orly Rose-Coloured Glasses and adding loose glitter on the nail tips. Barry M's new Whimsical Dreams glitter polish, launching this month, is perfect for recreating the effect.

Orly Rose-Coloured Glasses, £9.95 (NailPolishDirect); Barry M Classic Glitter Nail Paint in Whimsical Dreams, £3.99 (Superdrug, available September 20).

3. Mulberry's mirror mani

The simplest way to jump on the nail art bandwagon? Make like the models on the Mulberry catwalk with a chic metallic finish. Right on cue, Soigne has just released its long-awaited Le Miroir, just about the shiniest polish we've ever seen. It's limited-edition, so snap one up while you can.

Soigne Le Miroir, £23 (soignenails.com)

4. House of Holland's picnic wraps

By far the most intricate nail art of the season was seen at House of Holland, where tiny rectangular rhinestones were glued side by side on false nails, to create a 3D gingham effect to fit with the Dolly Parton meets Las Vegas-themed show. You don't have to go to all that effort however, because as part of the brand's continued collaboration with Elegant Touch, House of Holland has created ready-made press-ons in adorable red and blue gingham.

Elegant Touch House of Holland Picnic Pincers, £7.50 (eleganttouch.com)

WITH PARTY SEASON APPROACHING, IT'S TIME TO TAKE A LOOK IN THE MIRROR AND REASSESS YOUR BEAUTY STATION.

With so many lights, baubles and mirrored decorations on display at this time of year, it's hardly surprising we want to glam ourselves up as much as the festive frou-frou, and reinvent the art of getting ready.

To set the mood and help you shine as much as the tinsel on the trees, we've eyed up the best dressing tables, vanity units and beauty bars, so you can pamper and preen in style...

1. Ekby Valtor/Ekby Hemnes Wall Shelf, £16; Lots Mirror, £4.99 for pack of four; Pax Wardrobe, £130, and Lillholmen Wall Lamp, £12, Ikea
2. Malm Desk, £95; Godmorgon Mirror, £35, and Leds-jo LED Wall Lamp, £42, Ikea
3. Linea Medium Light Up Star, £25, House of Fraser
4. Pearl Arc Hangers, £12.95 for set of three, House of Bath
5. Pimlico Dressing Table Mirror, £195, The White Company
6. Stonedust Brush Holder, £24; Set of Make Up Brushes, £38 for pack of five with compact mirror, Oliver Bonas
7. Lund Allure Mirror with Tray, £60, Amara

FORGET JANUARY, THE BEST TIME TO OVERHAUL YOUR HABITS IS WINTER. LIZ CONNOR ASKS THE EXPERTS FOR THEIR TOP TIPS.

It's tempting to spend all winter hibernating on the sofa with a glass of wine, your only exercise being the slow shuffle to and from the fridge in between Netflix episodes.

That's why winter is secretly the best time to get your health mojo back. Here, three health and wellness experts reveal their top tips for keeping motivated and giving yourself a winter health reboot.

1. Have an alternative spring clean

Many of us traditionally celebrate the end of winter with a good old spring clean, but why not start as you mean to go by doing the same as winter looms?

"Clear out your cupboards and stock up on the foods that will help to promote winter wellness and give you the ingredients to create delicious dishes that will support your body's health as the temperature drops," advises nutritionist Rob Hobson.

Spices such as cinnamon, smoked paprika, turmeric, raw cacao and chilli powder offer warming flavours.

2. Keep an Instagram diary

"Use Instagram as a gratitude diary by taking a photo every day of something you feel grateful for," says health psychologist Dr Meg Aroll.

"Studies have shown that appreciating and noting down what we are thankful for enhances our overall satisfaction with life and lifts mood, leading us to feel more refreshed in the mornings."

3. Make the most of winter sports

Dr Aroll suggests finding a new hobby that celebrates winter, such as ice skating, snow kiting or indoor skiing.

"You could also consider doing something for the community, like volunteering. Nothing lifts the spirits more than helping others in need, and Christmas can be a significantly lonely time of year for many people."

4. Eat for the weather

When the weather's gloomy and you're feeling depressed, it can really impact on your appetite and food choices, which may leave you lacking in essential nutrients. Instead top up on B vitamins with wholegrains, oily fish, eggs, and dark green leafy vegetables.

5. Try getting out for a run

"A bracing winter breeze can be quite invigorating and prompt your body to release endorphins, which reduce your pain response and will put you in a great mood," says orthopaedic surgeon Dr Dan Robertson.

FORGET CURLY KALE, IT'S SOOOOO 2017. LEEKS ARE THE NEW SUPERFOOD - APPARENTLY.

From keeping sore throats at bay to improving the quality of the singing voice, leeks have long been known as the fat-free, nutrient rich answer to staying healthy and helping to combat winter colds.

Leek season is in full swing and they have been named as the 'new' superfood. According to posh supermarket Waitrose, it's all change in the culinary landscape of 2018.

Next year we'll be tucking into peanut butter, dark green veggies, turmeric and blueberries. Hopefully not in the same meal.

Waitrose has also revealed that shoppers' changing attitudes to eating and shopping.

The supermarket predicts tapas style Indian street food like smoked, grilled or seared delicacies, scallops or pickled ginger, are set to become in vogue for adventurous diners, alongside hearty, indulgent, 'dude food' from Japan like yakitori skewered chicken and deep-fried tofu in broth. Jane Orchard, manager of Waitrose Store Innovation says: "In these few years we've seen a marked shift in grocery shopping behaviour. Everyone's lives are busier than ever. And this coupled with more convenient ways to buy food - especially technological developments - mean people don't need to plan in advance." Waitrose has also predicted that food shopping habits will make a seismic shift with supermarkets becoming a more experiential retail space and the likes of wine bars and supper clubs becoming more popular.

How to cut the calories

KEEP YOUR WAISTLINE TRIM WITH THESE CHRISTMAS FOOD ALTERNATIVES.

If you don't want your diet de-railed by Christmas foods, follow Superfooduk.com nutritionist Shona Wilkinson's top tips for a healthy Christmas diet with these nifty food swaps...

1. Swap: Roasted potatoes in goose fat for roasted parsnips with paprika

Potatoes are classed as root vegetables, but they don't count towards your 5-a-day as they mainly contribute starch to the diet. 100g of roasted potatoes in goose fat contains 316 kcal and 13.5g of fat.

Parsnip is also a starchy vegetable, however it still counts towards your 5-a-day because it's a source of vitamins and minerals. Adding the paprika gives an extra nutritional boost as well as making them delicious. It is very high in beta carotene, which the body converts to vitamin A. One tablespoon of paprika will give you 70% of the recommended daily allowance of vitamin A.

100g serving of roasted parsnips is approx. 135kcal with 5.1grams of fat - almost three times less than the roast potatoes!

2. Swap: Pigs in blankets for Parma ham and asparagus

Pigs in blankets are sausages wrapped in bacon. They are then generally fried, making their fat content quite high, 19.3g of fat per 100g. They also contain 289kcal. Why not swap this unhealthy dish for Parma ham wrapped asparagus? The fibre content of the asparagus helps support healthy digestion and 100g of it only contains 13 kcal. Add in around four slices of Parma ham and you are still under 10g of fat and around 136 kcal.

3. Swap: Mince pies for Pavlova

One mince pie can have up to 350kcal, almost 17g of fat and a whopping 20g of sugar (five teaspoons!). A Pavlova with fruit and cream has slightly less calories, with 288 kcal and 13.2g of fat. It is however much higher in sugar, so my suggestion would be to ask for the fresh fruit with a little bit of cream (as the majority of the sugar is coming from the Pavlova base).

4. Swap: Stilton and port for goats' cheese and grapes
Stilton cheese has a high fat and calorie content; 100g contains 362 kcal and 31g of fat. Adding a glass of port to this snack bumps up the calories another 165kcal. Swap this for goats' cheese, which has slightly less calories and less fat; 100g contains 320 kcal and 25g fat. Add some grapes instead of the port and it's less than half the calories - and it's better for your liver.

5. Swap: Eggnog for prosecco

Eggnog is higher in calories; 145 kcal and 9g of sugar per serving. Prosecco per glass (approx. 125ml) has only 75 kcal and around 1g of sugar. Either option should be drunk in moderation as they both contain alcohol.

6. Swap: Chocolate log for Pannettone

Chocolate log is calorie-rich, with 100g having 453kcal and 22.8g of fat. Swap it for Pannettone (287kcal and 5.3g per 100g).

7. Swap: Honey glazed ham for smoked salmon

The calories and fat content are similar between these two products. However, smoked salmon is a better choice as it's rich in omega 3 essential fatty acids.

8. Swap: Stollen for roasted chestnuts

One slice has 254kcal, and is high in fat and sugar. Eating 10 roasted chestnuts instead will provide just over 200kcal, and only 1.85g of fat, less than 9g of sugar, and almost 3g of protein.

Meanwhile, Britain's favourite alcoholic drink is officially wine - after it supplanted beer as the nation's most popular tipple. In a poll last year, six out of 10 people chose wine as their 'drink of choice' as couples increasingly spend evenings at home, rather than at the pub.

Wine buff and chief executive of the Wine and Spirits Trade Association, Miles Beale, said the figures were proof wine was "no longer just for connoisseurs". But beer bosses balked at the claims from the YouGov poll that beer's popularity is on the wane.

Beer sales were up for the first time in a decade in 2016, by 1.3 per cent in comparison to 2015.

Research has shown that as people consume less alcohol overall, they are also deciding to drink more frequently at home rather than going out and choosing to drink sparkling wines, such as Prosecco, or a glass of red. And it's reflected in sales, too. Retail analysts Nielson said demand from British buyers for Argentinian wine soared by 35 per cent last year.

CELEBRITY CHEFS 27

Cooking up memories

GINO LOVES A 10-COURSE ITALIAN FEAST, WHILE JOHN WHAITE TAKES CHARGE OF THE SPROUTS.

Reminiscing over Christmases past is a crucial part of the festive season, especially when it comes to making a decision over what you'll be dishing up this year.

So, we caught up with a few of our favourite chefs to discover their ultimate Christmas foodie memories...

1. According to Tim Anderson, you can grow to love mince pies

MasterChef winner Tim is American, so his first British Christmas was quite the experience: "First of all, so many desserts - trifle, the cake, the Christmas pudding. Then my mother-in-law makes Christmas cookies and rocky road. Mince pies; I didn't like them at first, I thought they were too sweet, but now I can't get enough of them. And then the roast dinner, which I think is the height of British cooking. Roast potatoes, my father-in-law taught me to make them and they're amazing. We just do mash in America."

2. Rick Stein remembers a hot Aussie Christmas

"The first time I had an Australian Christmas, which was salad and prawns outdoor by the pool - and this was in the early-Eighties; my fond memories are always of having turkey or goose - but having a genuine Australian Christmas, which a lot of Aussies don't have, they still have roast turkey, was quite special," says the seafood aficionado.

3. Barbecuing in the snow is fine by Claire Thompson

The '5 O'clock Apron' blogger lived in Africa until she was eight, so grew up having hot Christmases by the pool, as did her Kiwi husband Matt. But some of her favourite Christmases have been since she moved to England and started spending time at her mum's house in Shropshire, although they still rarely have turkey: "We have a brilliant photo of Matt standing in gum boots in about 3ft of snow with a head-torch on, barbecuing steaks."

4. The trick is to have an all-day breakfast, says Kirstie Allsopp

To avoid rushing about with the turkey, while the kids open their presents first thing, the presenter and Kirstie's Real Kitchen author has restructured Christmas day: "I like to do the supper at six o'clock, after the Queen's speech, and basically have an all-day, rolling breakfast while everyone opens their presents. So, pancakes, scrambled eggs and maybe a bit of salmon - easy things. You can keep everyone fed and occupied - maybe have a couple of glasses of prosecco - and then have a big early supper."

5. In John Whaite's house, the sprouts are always waterlogged

"It's like a scene from Piranha - the good films, not the new ones with Kelly Brook - with hands coming from every direction trying to grab the crispiest potatoes," says the former Bake Off champion of his traditional Christmas lunches at home. "Poor mum always water-logs the Brussels sprouts, no matter how hard I try to say, 'Please, just fry them'. So I said, 'This year, I don't care what's happening, I will kidnap you if I have to, I'm taking your freedom away from you and I'm making my sticky Lebanese sprouts'."

6. For Gino D'Acampo, Italian Christmas lunch is a serious business

"Here, it's all about having a starter and then having this huge plate, where the turkey goes on top and the Yorkshire pudding and the potatoes, then it's pretty much over. In Italy it's different," explains Gino D'Acampo, whose new book, Gino's Italian Coastal Escape, was recently released. "We do between 10 and 15 different courses. We have fish, because we don't have turkey. One of the dishes we do is sea bass cooked in a salt crust. We do a lot of antipasti, cured hams and cheeses. There is a lot for everybody, and you put everything in the middle of the table and spend four or five hours eating."

7. Kate Young's granny makes the most decadent duvet beef

Australian-born food writer Kate Young remembers the year her granny visited the UK from Brisbane: "My granny made duvet beef for Christmas dinner. It's an enormous beef bump that she roasts for 45 minutes in a really hot oven, and then pulls it out and wraps up straightaway in foil, newspaper and then in a massive duvet, and then puts it in a box and leaves it for seven hours. It gradually cooks and it's the best rare roast beef you've ever had," she says.

A cracker or a turkey?

DOES YOUR BEHAVIOUR MEAN YOU'RE CRACKING COMPANY AT CHRISTMAS PARTIES?

Or does everyone thing you're a right turkey? Take our quiz to find out...

The office Christmas party is just getting underway, and you are...

a) Standing in the corner, moaning how bad the buffet is - but still find you're the last person to leave at the end of the night

b) Insisting on re-doing all the girls' make-up, they don't look nearly festive enough

c) Already on the dance floor and planning who to snog under the mistletoe

d) Too busy organising it to even think about having fun

When the clock strikes midnight on December 31, you're most likely to be...

a) At an expensive ticket-only party - grumbling about the cost

b) Telling everyone to sing Auld Lang Syne

c) Asleep - you got too excited, too early, and fell asleep at 10pm

d) Handing out drinks to everyone

What's your favourite part of the Christmas meal?

a) The potatoes - you can't go wrong with a spud

b) The turkey of course, but if it's dry it's awful

c) Christmas pud! It's so exciting when you're all looking for the hidden coin

d) The sprouts - well someone's got to love them...

You're asked to babysit your nieces on 23 December. You...

a) Say no - they'll be too excited and annoying

b) Agree, and while you're there, you prepare all your sister's Christmas dinner for her - she didn't ask you to, but she'll appreciate it

c) Jump at the chance to spend the evening writing letters to Santa

d) Say yes, then help them write Christmas cards for their mum and dad

You're going to watch a Christmas film. You choose...

a) The Grinch - it's great until it gets all soppy

b) Miracle On 34th Street - it's all about proving people wrong

c) Home Alone - it's so funny

d) It's a Wonderful Life - an oldie but a goodie

Your favourite part of a trifle is the...

a) Sponge at the bottom - shame you've got to eat the rest to get to it

b) Cream on the top - it's all about appearances

c) Jelly - it reminds you of jelly and ice cream at birthday parties

d) Sherry - you need it after rushing around on your feet all day!

A few days before Christmas, you're up extra early because...

a) You're getting the last-minute shopping out of the way before all the horrible crowds

b) You need to get presents for your partner's family, because you didn't like his choices

c) You're too over-excited to sleep any longer

d) You've offered to pick up the turkey from the supermarket for your in-laws

You're very festive night out will involve going...

a) To the same pub you always go to at this time of year - it's rubbish, but it's a tradition

b) To the pantomime. You like the bit where you say 'he's behind you'

c) Carol singing - you've put together a group and everyone will love it

d) To the kids' school disco to help chaperone

How did you score?

Mostly As: Unhappy uncle

Mostly Bs: Good gracious, Gran!

You always know best and you're not afraid to tell others when things aren't up to your high standard.

Mostly Cs: Little kid

There is over-excited... and then there's you! You are massively enthusiastic about all things Christmas.

Mostly Ds: Marvellous mum

Everyone looks forward to you coming round - you're always happy to help.

It's party time

Jedi Knights Joseph Masfield and Grant Brown

A bold and beautiful stroke of storytelling to divide fans

It's the most wonderful time of the year – according to the classic festive hit by Andy Williams. Yes, Andy it is, but not because it's nearly Christmas.

When Disney bought Lucasfilm in a multi-million dollar deal just over five years ago, the House of Mouse didn't rest on its laurels. Since that initial announcement in 2012 we have already been treated to three films in the festive period.

More by design than decision, The Force Awakens (TFA) was moved from a planned release in May 2015 to the December of that year following delays in filming – primarily because of Harrison Ford's on-set accident.

TFA was a safe return to the silver screen for the franchise, regurgitating much of what had gone before. In many ways it was brave to copy so many themes. Even tongue-in-cheek jokes about Starkiller Base being nothing more than another Death Star acknowledged its cut-and-paste nature.

This time last year, Rogue One proved that a Star Wars story utilising predominantly a fresh set of doomed characters could both satisfy and diversify away from the episodic structure.

I've now seen Episode 8. The Last Jedi (TLJ) is visually amazing, but it's not without flaws. In a word, it's mystical. A fantasy more so than previous episodes.

What American director Rian Johnson has achieved is an engaging, thrilling rollercoaster ride of emotions that will leave audiences exhausted and quite possibly flabbergasted.

Returning to the role of Luke Skywalker, Mark Hamill was understandably nervous about reprising the character that both made and hindered his acting career. Now in his 60s, his biggest worry was ruining the legacy of his previous involvement in the saga. He needn't have worried.

Mark's portrayal of a now aged Jedi is nothing short of mesmerising, and there has even been talk of Oscars. High praise indeed. Let's just say his performance is touching and nostalgic in what is a refreshingly unique entry in the saga.

Carrie Fisher is surprisingly good in this movie. I wasn't too impressed with General Leia in TFA, but in TLJ she is most impressive and another hot favourite for posthumous recognition come 2018's awards season.

Previous newcomers to the saga, John Boyega, Oscar Isaac and Daisy Ridley are now well established members of the Star Wars family. Indeed, the way in which Daisy carried TFA was no mean feat. If you thought she was good in that, you ain't seen nothing yet.

New characters are abundant, but Resistance maintenance worker Rose Tico – played by Kelly Marie Tran – is a revelation. She steals the majority of the scenes she appears in.

I caught up with a few fellow Star Wars fans at the end of the midnight screenings in both Telford – and via social media, in Birmingham – which saw the launch of Episode 8 to the general public on Thursday.

I met two young Jedis from the planet Cannock. Joseph Masfield and Grant Brown came dressed for the occasion, but left Cineworld in Telford more than a little perplexed. "I don't know what to think at this stage," said Joseph. "I need to go away and think about what I have just seen."

SURPRISES

Richard Powell from Sedgley was at the Telford screening too. He had already seen the film at Tuesday's European Premiere at The Royal Albert Hall. Richard, who is part of The Rebel Legion, a fundraising group who dress as Star Wars characters for charity events, was more casually dressed for the screening. "It's a great film, full of surprises," he said.

Chris Cooke and Jonathan Hipkiss, both from Halesowen, attended the midnight showing at Cineworld on Birmingham's Broad Street.

"The film starts great, but it definitely did not go the way I thought it would," said Chris.

"It's a bold and beautiful stroke of storytelling that will divide fan opinion," said Jonathan.

As for me? Well, I am a huge Star Wars fan, but much like my good friend Mark Newbold from Burntwood, founder of Star Wars fansite Fantha Tracks, I have my reservations.

Mark was at a special press screening on Monday. At the time he said:

"I need to see it again. Very impressive in places, less so in others. Mind whirling with thoughts."

I think Mark sums things up well. There is so much going on that the film not only warrants multiple viewings, it demands it. Yes, it has taken the saga in a bold direction, but for me – and countless fans – 1980's The Empire Strikes Back remains the benchmark.

Stars to shine at anniversary celebrations

Opera superstar Russell Watson is to stage a concert in Telford as part of the town and Oakengates Theatre's 50th anniversary celebrations.

The tenor will perform on August 4. Other stars to take part in next year's celebrations include comedians Dara O'Brien and Al Murray, Westlife's Brian McFadden and Boyzone's Keith Duffy.

There will also be a concert from Britain's Got Talent winners Collabro.

To mark the theatre's landmark birthday, it is moving to the Town Park Arena between August 4 and 19 to showcase an extravaganza of entertainment. Councillor Shaun Davies, leader of Telford & Wrekin Council, said: "I am delighted that we are able to announce such a varied range of acts for The Place In The Park. This will be a fabulous way of celebrating both Telford's and the theatre's 50th birthdays and there is something for everyone during the course of the run of events.

"We are putting the acts on sale in early December as tickets will make great Christmas presents for loved ones."

Other performances will take place including Scheherazade and 1001 Nights, set to take place on August 5.

On August 6 there will be a Sounds of the 60s show, with a Supersonic 70s concert taking place on August 7. Dara O'Brien is expected to fill the park when he performs on August 8. He will be followed by an 80s Mania show on August 9. Boyzlife will perform on August 10. Al Murray's show will be on August 10.

Collabro round out the announced shows, and will perform on August 16. More shows for the "extravaganza of entertainment" are set to be announced in the coming months.

The concerts will be part of a year of new or enhanced events to mark the anniversary. Other events will include a Festival of Telford Giants, a specially commissioned pantomime about the town and a Japanese influenced Sakura Festival.

Coming soon...

Fast and Furious action on way

Adrenaline fans from Oswestry and Welshpool can have their needs fulfilled when Fast & Furious Live heads to Birmingham as part of the first leg of a global arena tour.

The action and excitement from one of the most popular and enduring film series of all-time will come to life in this ground-breaking live-arena tour.

The tour comes to Arena Birmingham on April 20-22. Creative director and executive producer, Fast & Furious Live, Rowland French said: "It's been years in the making, and we are beyond excited to finally show fellow fans what we have been creating in order to bring Fast & Furious Live to the global stage. With this mix of extraordinary stunts, special effects, cutting-edge 3D-projection mapping – as well as drivers pushing their own limits – every performance will create an unforgettable experience for the live audience. Twenty-three cities across 14 countries is just the beginning for Fast & Furious Live."

The adrenaline-fueled, two-hour show is set to be the most spectacular live arena production ever produced, featuring precision performance driving and newly created physics-defying stunts. Using favourite cars and locations that criss-cross the globe along with key scenes from the film series – created via state-of-the-art 3D projection mapping – fans will be transported straight into this immersive extension of the Fast & Furious movies.

Shania is still the one

Country music fans from Oswestry and Welshpool will have a chance to see one of the genre's greatest stars in concert soon.

Multi-platinum, multi-award winning Shania Twain has announced six UK & Ireland arena dates for autumn 2018 – the first time Shania has toured here in 13 years.

The star said: "It's time to get back out there and give the music a chance to live a life."

She will embark on her first UK & Ireland tour since 2004's huge Up! Tour.

The star will take the stage at Arena Birmingham on September 24.

Shania is a five-time Grammy Award-winner and the reigning Queen of Country Pop. With 90 million albums sold worldwide, Shania remains the top-selling female country artist of all time. Shania's albums include her platinum-selling 1993 debut, Shania Twain; the Grammy Award-winning, double diamond-selling 1995 release, The Woman in Me; Come On Over, the best-selling studio album in Soundscan history by a female artist in any genre and the best-selling country album of all time with over 40 million units sold worldwide; and Up!, Shania's third consecutive Diamond-selling album release.

Recognising her indelible impact and achievements in music, Shania is the first and only female artist to receive CMT's Artist of a Lifetime Award. She was also honoured with the Icon Award at Billboard's Women in Music ceremony.

The Script to entertain fans

Irish three-piece The Script have announced their 2018 UK & Ireland Arena tour.

The group will play 13 dates including a night at Birmingham's Genting Arena on February 15.

Their latest album Freedom Child sees the band presenting a collection of urgent, timely, future-facing anthems that speak of both real-life events and real-time sonic futurism.

The album was recorded between London and Los Angeles and for the first time, the band chose to work with some outside writers and producers including Toby Gad and Nasri Atweh. The follow up to 2014's No Sound Without Silence can be purchased/streamed from <http://smarturl.it/FreedomChild>.

The Script are one of the world's most successful bands and have sold over 29 million records. They have scored multi-platinum albums, all of which were number one in the UK. The Script have also picked up a huge following in the USA where they have platinum selling singles under their belt.

THEATRE Severn's latest pantomime offering has proved a huge hit with youngsters. Hundreds of schoolchildren have taken a trip to the Shrewsbury theatre to enjoy this year's Christmas pantomime.

Among the students were children from Whittington Primary School near Oswestry who enjoyed Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. Thousands of families will head to Shrewsbury over the festive period to catch Victoria McCabe, as Snow White, on its mammoth run, stretching through to January 5. Spurred on by pantomime favourite Brad Pitt, who this year donned a frock to play the dame, Nurse Nellie, the pupils screamed, danced and sang their way through the show.

The biggest cheer of the performance came when the seven dwarfs, Cheeky, Brian, Sarge, Brummie, Sniffly, Rocker and Loopy marched on stage and got the pupils dancing. Marley Valentine from Whittington Primary said going to the pantomime, which is an annual event for the school, was his favourite day of the year. He added: "I love coming to see the pantomime because it's fun. I liked the bad ghosts this time because they were scary."

The show has been written by Telford born Paul Hendy and is produced by Evolution, the same team behind last year's pantomime, Cinderella. Radio Shropshire's Eric Smith returns again this year as Herman the Henchman, Joanne Heywood is playing the Wicked Queen Ivannah, Matt Dallen plays Muddles and Oliver Watton is making his Theatre Severn debut as the Prince. The pantomime is the theatre's biggest event of the year, selling thousands of tickets and plans are already underway for the 2018 pantomime, Mother Goose.

This year's cast stop for a photo-shoot

* THE Christmas lunch for the members of the Oswestry group of the Civil Service Retirement Fellowship was held at the Wynnstay Hotel on December. This was attended by around 30 members and guests who all enjoyed an excellent meal. The event was organised by Jan Stokes, and members have thanked her for her hard work. The next meeting, to be held on Tuesday, January 2, is the annual general meeting followed as usual by a lunch at the Wynnstay. This meeting will start at the usual time of 10.30am after coffee. Members are reminded that Ruth Haile will be standing down as chairman at this meeting, and anyone interested in replacing her is asked to come forward. The fellowship is a local group for government and other pensioners who are welcome to attend the meetings, which are usually held on the first Tuesday of each month at the Wynnstay Hotel, Oswestry, starting at 10.30am after coffee. There is an annual subscription for those pensioners who are not members of the Civil Service Retirement Fellowship which is £10. Further details can be obtained from chairman Ruth Haile on 01691 650993.

* A GAME that sees six people locked in a room and given an hour to escape has been sweeping the nation – and is now being launched in Mid Wales. The 'Breakout' game is popping up all over the UK, with people having an hour to work out a series of puzzles to escape. Currently there is one in Telford and Chester. And now Broneirion in Llandinam, near Newtown, has converted its cellar into two escape rooms themed 'Freaky Fairground' and 'Night at the Museum'. Everyone taking part, including adults and children, are charged £15 and there is a café on hand afterwards for debriefing and refreshments. Broneirion is taking bookings from January 8 and is expecting a lot of interest in the new attraction. All the money raised will go towards the £1 million a year needed to support the work of Girlguiding Cymru and give women and girls a voice across Wales. The escape rooms, the themes of which will change every six months, were the brainchild of Lesley Matthews, chief commissioner for Girlguiding Cymru. Lorna Morris, Broneirion's marketing officer, carried out market research by visiting three different escape rooms, including the nearest at Telford and is convinced the concept will take off in Mid Wales. She said: "These rooms are quite addictive because you want to find a way to escape quicker each time. They are great fun for families, for groups of friends or for corporate team building exercises."

By Jon Reay

This is the latest version of Subaru's bread-and-butter, Ford Focus-sized hatchback. The Impreza name dates back to 1992, and while it evokes memories of fire-breathing WRX and STI models for many people in the UK, Subaru explains that this car isn't trying to live up to that reputation.

Instead, it's built in the image of the original, more modestly powered model: offering a capable all-wheel-drive car for people who don't necessarily want a high-riding SUV.

Subaru stresses that the car is new from the ground up, complete with a brand new platform that will underpin future models in the range. The focus, says Subaru, has been on better driving dynamics and safety – the latter taken care of by a whole array of safety gear, headlined by the brand's ubiquitous EyeSight forward-facing dual-camera tech.

There have been plenty of changes under the skin, too. Subaru says the steering is now 0.1 seconds quicker to react (bear with us, it does make a difference), the already low centre of gravity has been dropped further still, the gearbox has lost 8kg of weight and the chassis is as much as 100 per cent stiffer in some areas. It's all been with the aim of making sure the Impreza isn't just safer than before, but that it bit better to drive too.

There's a choice of two engines: a 1.6 and a 2.0-litre, both naturally aspirated petrols.

Subaru continues to use its 'Boxer' engine configuration, which keeps the centre of gravity low and means it can slide in the brand's traditional 'symmetrical' all-wheel-drive system.

There's no diesel option, but fuel economy is reasonable for a petrol-powered car with permanent all-wheel-drive and an automatic gearbox. For now, we'd opt for the 2.0-litre: there's a more usable amount of power, and unlike the wheezy 1.6, it has the added bonus of steering wheel-mounted paddles for awaking the gearbox from its slumber.

Subaru has done away with a manual gearbox option, leaving only a CVT. It won't be to all tastes, but as CVTs go it's not too bad. Most of the time it's quite pleasant to use: smooth, unobtrusive, and willingly changes up and down its virtual gears without fuss.

Subaru has concentrated heavily on making the Impreza feel 'safe' on the road, which translates to predictable handling and almost unshakeable levels of grip, courtesy of its 'active torque split' four-wheel-drive system. Chuck the Impreza into a bend or roundabout with some vigour and it's easy to be impressed by its determination to hang on.

Thankfully the Impreza rides extremely well too, with very little intrusion from potholes, speed bumps and the like, while body roll is kept reasonably well in check as well.

Dynamically in fact, it's up there with some of its more mainstream rivals, and has something of a unique character of its own.

Imprezas have had something of a tumultuous history when it comes to styling, and even Subaru admits that the previous car wasn't anything to shout about in the looks department. To our eyes the new model is an improvement. It's a shame though that Subaru has chosen not to offer the more attractive 18-inch alloy wheels of our test car on UK models. They'd go some way to help the Impreza shake off its dowdy utilitarian image.

There are some definite improvements over the old car inside – though things are still inescapably Japanese. Material quality is still miles off that of the opposition, while Subaru freely admits that the dash hasn't been designed with purely aesthetics in mind.

What has been concentrated on is ergonomics: things like the climate controls are all easy to reach, and can be used without taking your eyes off the road, while dials are clear to read if not inspiring to look at.

Things are pretty roomy inside too – not something you could always say about the Impreza. Boot space is competitive at 385 litres, and rear leg room is impressive too: easily large enough for four six-foot-tall adults.

Subaru is only bringing one trim level to the UK: the 'SE'. There's plenty bundled in, particularly in terms of safety: you'll find blind-spot monitoring, rear cross traffic alert, pre-collision braking assist, lane departure warning and auto high-beam all as standard. Adaptive cruise control is thrown in too, as are auto LED headlights that now steer around corners, rain sensitive wipers, keyless entry, a reversing camera, climate control and heated front seats. Infotainment is taken care of with an eight-inch touch screen which works with Apple CarPlay and Android Auto, though no built-in sat nav is available.

The previous Impreza had been all-but forgotten in the UK; and it's likely that the new model will suffer the same fate. There are big improvements over the old car, but without some major UK-centric tweaks to its powertrain and gearbox, it'll continue to be a left-field choice.

That's a shame, because it's now dynamically very capable, doesn't look half bad and has a seriously generous standard kit list. If you're after a small family hatchback and value safety above all else, the Impreza is certainly worth a look.

Kia plug-in hybrids win two top green awards

Kia Motors (UK) Ltd. is delighted to announce two wins at the Next Green Car Awards 2017, with the all-new Niro Plug-in Hybrid (PHEV) winning in the crossover category and the all-new Optima Sportswagon PHEV winning in the estate category.

Both launched this year, the Niro and Optima Sportswagon PHEVs are another big step towards Kia's aim of reducing the average CO2 emissions of its entire range by 25 per cent, by 2020.

Leaders

The Niro PHEV can drive for up to 36 miles on electric power alone, whilst the Optima Sportswagon PHEV can travel for up to 38 miles in all-electric mode.

Next Green Car commented: "Kia is one of the market leaders in terms of PHEV electric range, and the Niro Plug-In Hybrid benefits from this focus.

"Throw in the fact that the PHEV technology is wrapped up in practical crossover packaging, and the Niro Plug-In Hybrid is expected to quickly climb the electric vehicle sales charts. For those wanting value-for-money motoring, practicality, and a plug-in powertrain, the Optima Sportswagon Plug-In Hybrid is one of the best options around.

"With a long electric range and load-lugging potential, Kia's Optima estate

opens up PHEV models to many buyers that need a large car but with low running costs."

The wins this year follow on from a very successful Next Green Car Awards 2016, where the Optima PHEV was victorious in the Large Family Car segment. In this year's shortlist, the Picanto has also been commended in the City Car category. Steve Hicks, UK sales director at Kia, said: "We are thrilled to have received these awards from Next Green Car.

"The Niro PHEV and Optima Sportswagon PHEV are great additions to both the Kia fleet and the ever-growing UK alternative fuel market.

"Having this choice of Plug-in Hybrid Electric Vehicles within the Kia range has enabled us to better meet our customers' changing needs – it's a very exciting time for Kia."

The Next Green Car Awards recognises the very best green cars that are currently and soon-to-be available. The judging is based on a number of factors, but is focused on the Next Green Car (NGC) rating, based upon real-world emissions data. This ultimately aids the judges in identifying the greenest models available.

New Mondeo is easier on the pocket

By Ian Donaldson

Ford has tried to make life simpler – and cheaper – for anyone who fancies a new Mondeo.

Simpler, by cutting the previous seven model variants to five and easier on the pocket, especially for the company car drivers who make up the vast majority Mondeo drivers, by cutting list prices by up to £3,200.

Not that simple, in fact, with the new Mondeo range stretching to 75 versions, taking in four-door saloon, five-door hatchback and estate and powered by diesel or petrol engines, or a petrol/electric hybrid.

Oh, and don't forget manual or automatic transmissions and the possibility of all-wheel drive.

As to the price cuts; perhaps they now reflect the sort of discount you'd have already been able to wangle from your dealer in a private sale. More importantly, they lower the benefit in kind (BIK) pinned on a company car user.

Take the cheapest new Mondeo, a £19,455 Zetec 1.0T Ecoboost hatchback (hardly anyone will) and a company car user will be massaged a gentle £70.51 a month in BIK if they're a 20 per cent taxpayer.

At the other end of the Mondeo scale, a £32,695 Vignale Estate with 2.0 diesel engine, auto gears and all-wheel drive (another ultra rare combination) will hit its 40 per cent taxpayer user for £324.40 a month.

Whichever new Mondeo you end up with it will now certainly come with DAB, cruise control, satellite navigation, front and rear parking sensors and automatic emergency city braking, this latter feature responsible for a two or three group drop in insurance

Ford has made buying a Mondeo simpler

ratings, thanks to a lowered likelihood of bent bumpers.

Ford thinks private buyers will fancy a Mondeo in ST-Line trim, which adds £3,500 over the cost of an entry level Zetec but includes larger (18ins) alloy wheels, mildly lowered and stiffened suspension, front sports-style seats with red stitching, alloy foot pedals and a dark headliner.

They're in addition to a styling kit that marks out an ST-Line car thanks to unique bumpers front and rear and lower side panels in body colour. Inside, you'll also discover smart velour floor mats, a push button starter and more red stitching to steering wheel, centre console and side trims.

Out on the road in a highly spec'd ST-Line, costing £26,595 and boasting automatic gears and all-wheel drive, you notice how much of the latest Mondeo stays unchanged

You won't have trouble beating 40 mpg in your diesel Mondeo

– and are thankful for it. Things start off well with a perfect driving position and set of clear instruments ahead of you and continue in similar fashion as you discover a car that rides the rougher streets of London with well damped aplomb.

The interior is neat and orderly but doesn't give off the posh car ambience that points people to dearer cars like an Audi but holds its own against an obvious competitor in the equally roomy shape of Vauxhall's Insignia.

A range-topping Vignale version tried later was quieter still and presented a more modern and crisply digital instrument cluster but still wouldn't worry an Audi for instant interior appeal.

Still, you won't have trouble beating 40mpg in your diesel Mondeo and the taxman won't think Christmas has arrived when he ask for your Exchequer contribution.

VW redefining its market with update

By Graham Breeze

Competition keeps growing so Volkswagen simply just up the stakes by improving the Golf – after all this is the model which started the hatchback sector.

There's nothing revolutionary about the updated version of the seventh generation Golf it's simply VW redefining its market segment by bringing 'big car' technology to the compact family car class.

It's a simple but clever move, after all why fix something that isn't broken. Growing sales figures across the globe prove the product fits, but now you get the option of all new engines with more technology, better connectivity and just a tweak to the styling package.

Golf now has an option for just about every possible buyer, whether private or fleet. In fact there are no less than 88 choices so you can expect to spend a bit of time in the showroom. And with prices ranging from £18,665 to £34,985 there's also a model for just about every pocket.

The UK line-up retains a familiar feel, beginning in the hatchback range with S and rising through SE, SE Nav, GT, R-Line, GTE, GTE Advance, e-Golf, GTD and GTD BlueLine to GTI, GTI Performance and, ultimately, R. The estate family offers generous choice, too, with S, SE, SE Nav, GT and GTD and GTD BlueLine models being joined by Alltrack and R.

You can't help but be impressed by the levels of technology introduced to the sector. For the first time in the compact class and depending on model, the new Discover Navigation Pro radio-navigation and online system can be operated via gesture control.

Sporting a 9.2-inch screen, the system complements the Active Info Display that is also new in the Golf and appears as standard on all Performance Golfs.

The range of online services and apps has also been enlarged.

There's a lot more than a gimmick package on offer though. VW claims a new benchmark for assistance systems in the compact class, employing technologies that will significantly improve safety.

Technology

Depending on model, these include: City Emergency Braking with new pedestrian monitoring; a new Traffic Jam Assist that offers semi-automated driving at speeds of up to 37 mph and Emergency Assist which notifies if the driver is incapacitated and initiates various measures to rouse them in escalating stages culminating in carrying out an emergency stop.

BlueMotion Technologies include a stop-start system and a mode for storing braking energy (regenerative braking). There was also an impressive safety package including all-round airbags and a full stability control package.

On test was a GTD 2.0litre TDi 184PS version with seven-speed automatic gearing and priced at just under £30,000.

There was a top speed of 143mph, 0-62mph in 7.4seconds, impressive CO2 emissions of only 124g/km and combined fuel figures of 60mpg.

Design modifications include new bumpers

Design modifications include new bumpers front and rear, new halogen headlights with LED daytime running lights or full LED headlights front and rear, new halogen headlights with LED daytime running lights or full LED headlights – standard in higher specification cars and optional in other models – instead of xenon headlights; new front wings; and new full LED rear lights as standard for all Golf versions.

New wheel designs and body colours round out the exterior update, while new trim panels and materials also upgrade the interior of the Golf.

Well weighted steering, choosing the adaptive damping system and the electronic differential mean the Golf remains a joy to drive – regardless of the road conditions.

Volkswagen bosses have ensured that the Golf will continue to grow sales with the latest improvements though there is a price to pay for the new technology.

Adding gesture control navigation, the driver assist package, LED headlights, chassis control and leather interior pushed the price up to £35,395 – and that's a lot to pay for a hatchback.

Outsiders on target in a night of shocks

THE tables were turned as some of the outsiders in the Montgomeryshire and District Airgun League pulled off stunning performances in the latest action.

After a run of predictable results the previous week, the sport of shooting showed just how fickle a mistress it can be as the league heats up.

Gullsfield B celebrated their first win of the season when they shot against Forden, with the home side struggling to find their form. Catherine Farmer led the scoring for the Gulls, shooting a season personal best of 34.2 to cement her side's domination of the match. With a win now under their belts, the team will be hungry for more success in the upcoming matches.

His team evidently took inspiration from his performance, with Nigel Kelton also breaking the 35-point barrier.

Crew Green brought home the bacon in fine style, ending the match with a five point advantage over their hosts.

Meanwhile, Crew Green B were also in action, with a six-member Newtown team travelling to the Admiral Rodney.

The Chinese believe seven to be a lucky number, but evidently nobody had told Jess Corbett's team that as they overcame their numerical disadvantage to win with 199.7 points to CGB's 195.1, with Tabitha Corbett again shooting a possible, her fourth of the season.

Perhaps the tensest match of the evening took place between Gullsfield A and Churchstoke; the pressure manifesting itself in below-average scores for both teams.

There was very little between the two sides; with the two captains, Paul Phillips and Brian Davies, shooting identical scores in their round.

The lead changed hands repeatedly, and after the last shot of the match, frantic calculations took place to determine the winners. Churchstoke escaped by the skin of their teeth, taking the match by 0.4 points, with 200.3 to Gullsfield A's 199.9.

Perhaps the biggest shock of the evening came when a six-man Llanfair Caereinion visited Ardleen, and stunned everyone by outshooting the former league champions.

Nick Lloyd's team shot their hearts out and achieved a score far above their season average, with Dai Tom Williams being the evening's highest scorer with a superb 35.6.

Despite possibles from Jack Francis and Richard Lewis, the home side couldn't quite overhail the visitors; the final 198.1 – 199.3 result going in Llanfair's favour.

The Llanfair team have struggled at various points thus far but with this performance they sent a clear message – any team in this league are worthy adversaries and that no result is a forgone conclusion.

Seven shooters achieved scores of 35 points or above this week; Nigel Kelton (35.1), Owen Stimpson (35.2), Edward Kelton and Jack Francis (35.3), Richard Lewis (35.4), Tabitha Corbett (35.5) and Dai Tom Williams (35.6).

Ladies sign off with loss

OSWESTRY Ladies ended the first half of the season in the Cheshire Women's Hockey League division two with a 5-2 loss at Neston Ladies II.

The defeat sees them stay third bottom, with their next game home to Bebbington Ladies on Saturday, January 6.

RUGBY by John Bridgwater

OSWESTRY narrowly failed to become the first side to win away at Heaton Moor this season after being edged out 20-12 by their Stockport hosts in rugby's South Lincs and Cheshire Two.

It was an intriguing battle between an Eagles side so impressive on the road this season, and a Heaton Moor outfit who have not tasted defeat on home soil this term.

Oswestry pushed the Cheshire side all the way, but ultimately just missed out in their last action before the Christmas break.

They were looking to avenge a narrow defeat by just six points earlier in the campaign, and were up for the challenge in testing conditions.

Although they had led 12-10, second half pressure from their opponents turned the game around to leave the visitors to return home empty handed. The Eagles had fallen behind to a controversial try after just a minute when a strong Heaton drive, roared on by their home support, resulted in a turnover ball which saw their centre speed over the line.

However, it appeared that the player did not ground the ball and knocked on, but the referee - who was unsighted - contentiously awarded the score to give the hosts a seven point advantage with the conversion added.

Oswestry looked to claw their way back into the game, but their efforts were met by some strong defence that halted them in their tracks.

Heaton missed a chance to add to their lead when spurning a penalty which resulted in Luca Owen-Youens catching the loose ball and launching a strong run out of his 22 in which he knocked a couple of Heaton players out of the way before finding touch.

Close range

A resilient Oswestry were starting to make inroads with some big hits and their efforts took them into their counterparts' 22.

A powerful drive from the forwards pushed the hosts back towards their own line, the ball rolling onto the posts before captain Andrew Smith drove over for the score from close range, with Luca Owen-Youens levelling matters with the conversion.

The Eagles continued to show plenty of resistance, but suffered a blow when Smith was handed a yellow card for an issue in the scrum in the half hour.

Now down to 14 men, the visitors managed to survive for the next 10 minutes with Michael Keaveny coming on to join the Oswestry pack.

Despite a player short, Oswestry were now pushing Heaton back towards their 22 and their drive saw Jack Charmley, Nick Clay and Connor Blair combine before releasing Jonathan Hughes who ran in a wonderful try from over 20 yards for a 12-7 lead with the conversion missed.

With Smith back on the pitch after the restart, Oswestry were again looking to take the game to their hosts before the half time whistle went.

Early in the second half, Oswestry conceded a soft penalty which saw Heaton reduce the arrears to 12-10.

The Eagles were again under the cosh with Heaton gaining ground into the 22, but they repelled their visitors before threatening at the other end as Nick Clay was held just short of the try line.

However, the home side were not to be denied

The Oswestry pack get a shove on near the hosts' line and (below) Fletcher Owen-Youens in a line-out despite the visitors' efforts, and edged ahead in the last quarter to secure a hard-fought win.

After a creditable first half of the campaign Oswestry now take a break with their next league game at home to Didsbury and Toch H on Saturday, January 6.

OSWESTRY II, looking to push up the North West League division four south, were handed the points as Macclesfield Fourth pulled put of their fixture. Their next action is away to Lymm Fourths on Saturday, January 6.

COBRA back and show no signs of rust

ward orientate battle, but Llani held out until just before half time when a spell of pressure ended with an unconverted try in the corner.

Scrum half Bryn Davies took a quick tap penalty and, despite being held up close to the line, open side flanker Aled Humphreys powered over from close range.

After the break, the Meifod men held the upper hand in the scrums, which resulted in a couple of pushover tries from No8 Dorian Lloyd, the first of which was converted by Will Worthington for a 17-7 scoreline.

Worthington missed a couple of kicks at goal to have increased the margin, but the home side had done enough to claim the spoils in testing conditions.

It was COBRA's second home win this season against Llanidloes, while the sides will meet twice in the new year, one in the league and also in the quarter-final of the Conwy Land Rover North Wales Intermediate Cup.

The Meifod side have no game on Saturday, before visiting local rivals Welshpool on Saturday December 30.

WELSHPOOL found Denbigh too hot to handle as they crashed

79-0 at the unbeaten leaders to remain in the basement places in division two.

Denbigh, who are 20 points clear at the top, crossed the line 13 times in their 10th straight win. Owain Davies scored four touchdowns, and there were two apiece for Dan Sullivan and Aldyn Jones.

Pool, meanwhile, face a trip to local rivals Newtown in the last eight of the Intermediate Plate, the tie to be played before February 17.

Shropshire U18 bowls team facing tough season

LIFE could be about to get a whole lot tougher for Shropshire's under-18 bowls team in the British junior county championships.

Big changes to the Drakes Pride-sponsored competition, including a new league structure to stop the mismatches of recent seasons, are proposed for next year by Warwick & Worcester – with the support of Shropshire junior selector Phil Scott.

And with Shropshire currently in a period of transition, having not reached the final since 2014, it means difficult matches every fixture could lie ahead.

The plan is to reduce fixtures from 24 bowlers to 20-a-side – with 10 home and 10 away – to take the pressure off counties who struggle to field junior sides and have to withdraw from the championship.

Counties would then be placed in three groups of five – based on their results from the last four years – playing each other on a league basis to determine the champions of each section, followed by promotion and relegation of the top and bottom teams.

Thanks to more wins than losses since 2014, Shropshire would feature in the top group alongside reigning champions Yorkshire, mighty Warwick & Worcester, now strong Wales and Derbyshire.

Shropshire lost to W&W by 50 shots in a group game this year to miss out on the knockout stages and have generally found the going much tougher at junior level in recent times.

But Scott, who is also junior secretary of the British Parks, feels changes are needed to keep the championship thriving.

A W & W spokesman said the change to 20 bowlers per match "intends to strengthen the quality of bowls at the top level . . . and to encourage counties to remain in the competition where they may struggle to enter teams."

The supplementary completion would become a thing of the past, the spokesman adding that a league structure would 'maintain competitive games for all teams through the competition'.

W&W want the proposals discussed and voted on at the British association's rules revision meeting on January 20.

Presentation night change for bowlers

A NEW officer and changes to the annual presentation dinner are looming for Shropshire's biggest bowls league.

The appointment of an assistant competition secretary in 2018 was discussed at the SPS Whitchurch League's latest executive meeting.

If approved, they will take charge when comps chief Phil Scott – who also has British and North Shropshire Parks roles and Shropshire junior duties – is unavailable.

The assistant's job will also include publishing details of competitions to try and ease Scott's load and increase entry numbers.

League secretary Alison Hine is also working on changes to the 2018 prize-giving function, with the goal being to boost numbers attending back towards the full house days at Whitchurch Civic Centre.

"We are going to bring the dinner forward a week to miss the school half term week – and are also looking at having some form of entertainment again," explained Hine.

Welshpool sidelined – and rivals close gap

AFTER being sidelined by the weather, pacesetters Welshpool Town saw their lead at the top of the Spar Mid Wales League division one trimmed to seven points by two of their chief rivals.

Carno kept up the pressure on the Maesydre men with a 6-2 beating of struggling Borth United on the 3G at Aberystwyth's Park Avenue ground.

Jac Petrie and Jordan Jones both scored twice, with Ioan Humphreys and Peter Rees also finding the net as the visitors moved into second spot.

Llanidloes Town are also seven points behind the leaders, with two games in hand, after taking over in third position with a 4-2 victory away to Tywyn Brynrcrug.

Being the only other first division game to survive the winter blast, George Clarke scored twice in the first half to put the Daffs on course, his first a fine strike from an angle before rounding the keeper to double the lead.

The lively Ryan Biggs then set up a third after excellent work down the right, firing in a cross for Josh Hartrick to tap in.

Tywyn made the most of some defensive hesitation to pull one back, and scored a second in the last minute from the penalty shot after Drew Reynolds had handled.

But the Daffs were not to be denied as they sealed victory moments later when Biggs again showed his energy down the flank before crossing for Richie Evans to convert.

Mid-table Berriew failed to make up ground after being edged out 2-1 at Aberaeron, Steffan Rogers getting their reply.

The weather again decimated the programme with high flying Welshpool's home fixture with Radnor Valley, and Llanfair United's trip to struggling Machynlleth, two of the casualties.

Third place

Second placed Llanrhaeadr, looking to keep up the pressure on the leaders, were also kicking their heels as their home clash with Llandrindod Wells fell victim to the weather.

Kerry's game at Bow Street and Churchstoke's home encounter with Knighton Town were also off.

Just one game survived in the second division, with Aberystwyth University notching a 3-0 home victory against Dolgellau.

Despite being down to 10 men for 55 minutes, the students showed their strength in heavy conditions to secure the spoils that saw them cement third place in the table.

Owain ap Gareth was harshly dismissed for two bookings on 35 minutes, but the home side responded with plenty of resolve.

They led at the break with a penalty from Liam Powell after James Watts had been brought down, before Powell notched his second and Watts sealed the win.

Games off included Llansantffraid Villages's trip to Newbridge and Montgomery's visit to Brecon Northcote.

■ Carno boss Chris Davies, whose side have climbed up to second in the Spar Mid Wales League division one table, has been named the division's manager of the month while Brecon Northcote's Anthony Thornley has picked up the second division accolade.

Bow Street's Tom Evans is the division one player of the month, while Jack Biggs (Hay St Mary's) is the recipient of the second division award.

FC Oswestry Town's revival in the Hallmark North West Counties League division one was again halted by the weather.

After their home fixture with high flying Silsden was off the week before due to snow, Town were hopeful of getting back to action away to Cheshire side Sandbach United.

But the encounter succumbed to a frozen pitch, with the decision to call off made following an early morning pitch inspection.

"With the run we've been on, it's frustrating as we now feel we're good enough to get points from every game," said joint manager Ryan Butcher.

"There's not much we can do about it, but we will train twice this week and look to carry on the form into the New Year."

Next up, Town - who are top of the form league - are away to mid-table side Abbey Hutton United on Saturday, before hosting Shropshire rivals and title contenders Whitchurch Alport at Park Hall on Boxing Day (3pm).

"That's going to be a real test to see where we are," added Ryan.

The Oswestry side, who still have 21 league games remaining, have bolstered their squad by signing centre midfielder Ed Moss from Whitchurch Alport, and Sam Spridgeon, a pacy forward from Chester.

Meanwhile, Town's derby against West Midlands League premier division side Ellesmere Rangers in the quarter-final of the Shropshire Challenge Cup was also postponed due to snow on the Park Hall pitch.

It has been rearranged for next month.

GUILS frustrated as Rhyll ten stand firm

FOOTBALL by John Bridgwater

GUILDSFIELD remain in fifth position in the Huws Gray Cymru Alliance after being frustrated by a 10-man Rhyll in a goalless stalemate at Clos Mytton.

The villagers had the better of the encounter, but could not find a way through their visitors who played the last 35 minutes with a man down following the dismissal of Chris Durkin.

It was the second time the sides had drawn this season but, despite reflecting on two points dropped in the return, the Guils could take some consolation from preserving their unbeaten home record against resilient opponents.

With the pitch holding up well despite the recent snow and rain, both sides had chances to make the breakthrough in the first half.

Rhyll almost took the lead on 12 minutes when Alun Webb beat home keeper Andy Wycherley to a ball over the top but rolled his shot narrowly wide of the of the post.

Webb also put another effort wide but Guilsfield had a good opening when Asa Hamilton broke through the defence only to be denied by keeper Rory Crowther.

The encounter threatened to boil over early in the second half following a period of strong challenges, which eventually led to Rhyll's Durkin seeing red for a wild lunge.

Despite a man down, the Lilywhites held firm, with a succession of last ditch tackles and blocks denying the home side.

Adam Jenkins had the best chances to break the deadlock with a free kick which was tipped past the post by Crowther, and then the same player could only find the side netting from a close range effort.

It was a first clean sheet of the season for Rhyll, but the Guils would have been disappointed not to have found a way through as they look to keep up the pressure on the leaders.

Postponed

Caersws, needing points to climb clear of relegation danger, were again frustrated by their weather as their trip to fellow strugglers Queens Park was postponed.

Meanwhile, Newtown gained three crucial points to keep alive their chances of a top six place in the JD Welsh Premier with a 2-1 win over Llandudno at Latham Park.

The Robins took a 42nd minute lead when Luke Boundford lobbed advancing former Newtown keeper Dave Roberts.

The visitors were back on level terms just past the hour mark when Shaun Cavanagh volleyed into the roof of the net from a James Joyce cross.

But substitute Joe Kenton came off the bench to the winner 10 minutes from time when he cut in from the right before angling a shot past Roberts.

Ground staff worked tirelessly throughout the day to make the fixture possible, but it was Llandudno who warmed to the challenge early on during a cold night.

Toby Jones went narrowly close to giving the visitors the lead on the 25 minute mark when shooting just wide from 20 yards.

Craig Williams had a free kick saved with the Robins' first on target, before Marc Williams and Jones both saw shots blocked by some dogged Newtown defending.

The deadlock was almost broken five minutes from half time as Newtown keeper Dave Jones was closed down by Williams and the ball spun towards the goal, but the stopper managed to get back and save his own blushes.

Medal joy for young Olympians

Jack Tinney, Aaron Warburton and Charlie White Jones - the leaders of the Olympians' bronze medal winning under-11 boys team

OSWESTRY Olympians Juniors secured three medals when the Shropshire Young Athletes' League concluded for the season with the final race at Oswestry School.

Liam Rawlings was the undisputed winner of the under-15 boys with a perfect score of four wins from four races, while Jack Tinney ended up a double medalist with an individual silver and a team bronze in the under-11 boys event.

For the final race of the season, the seven strong under-11 girls team were first to take on the 1500 metre course.

Evie Foster was the first Olympian home in ninth place. Jess Steel, Seren Roberts, Libby Williams and Shannon Wilson all came home in the top 30 while Isla Rothera and Kate Hotchkiss both broke the ten minute barrier.

The under-11 boys also fielded seven athletes for the same 1500 metre course.

A team award seemed on the cards when Charlie White Jones came in fifth, Jack Tinney sixth and Aaron Warburton eighth, while Morgan Hodgkiss, Daniel Morris and Freddie Heasmer-Jones kept up the momentum with top 30 finishes.

Despite picking up an ankle injury, Harry Cartwright showed great bravery to complete the course in a little over seven minutes.

The under-13 boys faced a 3km course with Massimo Wyatt again the first Olympian home in ninth.

Next was Tom Hotchkiss, closely followed by Ben Rothera and Sam Newton, to secure fourth place for the team both on the day and for the season.

Improving

Just three Olympians featured in the girls' under-13 2km race. Mia Wyatt maintained her record of being the first Olympian home, just one second ahead of the rapidly improving Lucy Othen. Molly Tinney successfully completed the course in a little over nine minutes.

Fielding a full four runners for the first time this season, the under-15 girls ended fourth on the day but fifth for the season.

Bethan Jones was the first Olympian home in 11th, just one place ahead of Mia Tate, while Anna Rothera and Katie Othen both successfully completed the course to secure points for the club.

Oswestry had just one under-15 boy entry in Liam Rawlings who did what he has done all season, leading from the start to finish over a quarter of a minute ahead of his nearest rival, William Kay of Telford. With Liam having won all three previous races, it took little time for the scorers to confirm him as the Shropshire under-15 boys champion.

Injuries robbed Tom Wilde and Ianto Owen of the chance to compete, but Matthew Collins kept the club flag flying coming home 11th in the under-17 boys 5km race.

With the Young Athletes League now completed for 2017, the focus turns to the Shropshire Championships for all ages under-13 and above at Attingham Park on Saturday, January 6.

Forden are spot-on for tense win in Central Cup

FORDEN United kept their flag flying in the Central Wales Cup with a tense penalty shootout victory over Padarn United in the second round at Newtown's Latham Park.

The sides had finished 2-2 in normal time of a closely contested encounter with Forden on the mark through Ryan Sutton and Carl Phillips.

They then produced an unblemished performance in the shootout by converting all five penalties, while Padarn crucially missed one when striking the bar. The winners are home to Kerry in the third round

It was an excellent effort from Forden who, having trailed 1-0 at the break, then hit back to lead in the second period, before the visitors struck late on to level matters and set up a penalty decider.

Meanwhile, Welshpool and Guilsfield have both landed home ties in the third round of the Central Wales Cup.

After receiving byes in the second round, both now enter the competition with Pool welcoming Penrhyncoch and the Guils entertaining Machynlleth.

Full third round draw

Welshpool v Penrhyncoch, Caersws v Aberaeron, Guilsfield v Machynlleth, Knighton Town v Berriew, Builth Wells v Llandysul, Carno v Bow Street, Bishop's Castle v Llanfair United, Montgomery v Llanidloes Town, Llanyrnnech or Newcastle Emlyn v Four Crosses, Tywyn Brynrcrug v Hay St Mary's, New Quay v Churchstoke, Radnor Valley v Llanrhaeadr, Llandrindod Wells v Borth, Waterloo Rovers v Presteigne, Dyffryn Barw v Brecon Northcote or Aberdilly, Forden Utd v Kerry.

Big guns are out for chess Congress

SHROPSHIRE'S chess congress is shaping up to be a masterclass in its strongest section, with two Grandmasters and four International Masters already signed up for January's event, writes TOBY NEAL.

But one deadline for would-be entrants is fast approaching, as any entries received after December 22 will attract a £5 late entry fee.

The tournament from January 5 to 7 at the Wrekin Housing Trust in Telford is Shropshire's biggest chess event with a first prize of £1,000 in the Open section. And for the first time there will be three other sections - previously there have been two - giving players of all abilities better hopes of getting among the prize money.

Unless they take a bye in any round, players will all play five games over the weekend.

League games are of course taking a break over Christmas, and in two of the latest results Shrewsbury B drew against Division Two leaders Newport B, while Newport Juniors beat Priorslee Lions B.

Saints frozen off at double

LOOKING to push into the top half of the table, St Martins were frustrated by another blank weekend in the West Midlands League division one as the cold weather continued to bite.

After their midweek trip to Haughmond in the quarter-finals of the TJ Vickers Shropshire FA County Cup was postponed, the Saints were again left kicking their heels when last Saturday's clash away to Tipton Town was called off.

The lack of action keeps St Martins just below mid table in 10th spot, one place above Tipton.

Dan Stevens' side were hoping to get back to action with a home encounter against Gornal Athletic on Saturday, followed by a trip to Allscott on Saturday, December 30.

Fair play to Berriew who lead the way

BERRIEW are the high fliers in the Spar Mid Wales League fair play league this season with just five cautions and no red cards.

While the Rhiewsidars are leading the way, Welshpool Town are also keeping their cool on the pitch to occupy a top five berth having also had no player sent off this term.

By contrast, Llanrhaeadr are languishing second bottom in the table with four red cards and 18 cautions, and Llanfair United are just one place above after picking up three dismissals and 26 bookings.

Llansantffraid Village are going well at the top of the second division fair play league, with just three bookings and no reds this term.

Guildsfield are lying in fifth spot in the Huws Gray Cymru Alliance fair play table, with one red and 28 yellows, and lie 30 points behind leaders Porthmadog.

The New Saints are lying in fifth spot in the JD Welsh Premier fair play standings with one red and 19 cautions - 42 points adrift of leaders Barry Town United.

■ ■ ■ ■ ■
The Spar Mid Wales League sees some appetising games in division one on Boxing Day as the race for honours continues.

High flying Welshpool Town make the short trip to Berriew, who earned a last gasp 2-2 draw at Maesydre in the first meeting between the sides a few weeks ago.

Llanfair United entertain Llanrhaeadr, two sides who are more than capable of challenging for honours, while second placed Carno welcome Tywyn Bryncrug.

■ ■ ■ ■ ■
Guildsfield look to consolidate their top five position in the Huws Gray Cymru Alliance when they host Powys rivals Caersws on Boxing Day (2.30).

The Guilds are going well this season, but were left frustrated in last weekend's 0-0 draw with Rhyl who played the last 35 minutes with 10 men.

However, they are still unbeaten at their Clos Mytton base and are currently seven points off the pace.

Clarke gets call for Windies tour

BATSMAN Joe Clarke has been confirmed in the England Lions squad to play in the West Indies in February and March next year.

The former Oswestry and current Worcestershire player has already been on tour with the Lions in Australia, and the 21-year-old will be joined by Lancashire's Keaton Jennings who will captain the side and Middlesex bowler Toby Roland-Jones return from injury.

Selector James Whitaker said: "We have selected a total of 22 players for these two series in the West Indies, to ensure we gain the most of assessing players in first-class and one-day cricket."

SAINTS TOP THE TREE AT XMAS

FOOTBALL by John Bridgewater

AFTER their midweek success, The New Saints will look to strengthen their hold on the JD Welsh Premier title chase when they head into a busy festive spell.

Early goals from Jamie Mullan and Ryan Brobbel put the Saints on course for a 3-0 victory over close rivals Connah's Quay Nomads at Park Hall on Tuesday night, with Jon Routledge sealing the spoils 13 minutes from time.

That win put the defending champions four points clear of second placed Bangor City and seven ahead of the Nomads - as well as having a game in hand.

Boss Scott Ruscoe reflected on one of his best side's best performances of the season, adding: "To score two goals so early on settled our nerves. We defended fantastically and played some great stuff attacking wise, and we're really happy with three goals and a clean sheet."

"We've put a bit of distance between us at the top, but we won't get carried away, and we now need to maintain these standards going forward."

Ruscoe will want to maintain the momentum in another home outing on Friday night when Aberystwyth Town are the visitors to Park Hall (7.45pm).

That encounter is then followed by a double header against Newtown, with the Saints visiting Latham Park on Boxing Day before hosting the return on Saturday, December 30, both with 2.30pm kick-offs.

With the games coming thick and fast, the league leaders then head to Bala Town for a televised encounter on January 2 before visiting struggling Prestatyn Town the following Friday.

First up, their focus will be on an Aberystwyth side that has eased basement concerns with a string of impressive results, including last weekend's 7-1 thrashing of Prestatyn.

The Saints themselves were made to battle all the way before overcoming the Black and Greens 2-1 away back in October, but will be confident of completing a double on Friday night.

They have a good home record against the Seaside, losing just once back in September 1993, while they have won 19 times and drawn five.

The convincing midweek victory against last season's runners-up Connah's Quay could prove a decisive moment as the Saints chase a seventh successive league crown.

They never looked back after Mullan, from a rebound, and Brobbel, following a fine run, both scored inside the first 13 minutes.

Skipper Marie Male drives in to office before joining in a snowball fight. Pics: Ken Done.

IT was more snow balls than golf balls as Oswestry Golf Club's new lady captain Marie Male braved the elements when driving into office.

The new captain for 2018 was joined by a healthy turnout of members who, having wrapped up warm, first had to clear the snow from the first tee in order for Marie to hit the first shot in the traditional driving-in ceremony.

Golf pro Richard Edwards said: "It was a great day, a bit of fun."

"We had a really good turnout of members despite the weather, with 30-40 here. The temperature outside was minus four degrees."

All-rounder Roman gets England call

YOUNG all-rounder Roman Walker, who featured on a number of occasions for Oswestry last season, has been selected for the England under-19s World Cup squad.

Wrexham-born Walker, 17, a Glamorgan Academy player, was confirmed in the 15-man squad for the tournament to be held in New Zealand next month.

The 6ft 3ins hard hitting batsman and pace bowler, who played for Oswestry in the Birmingham League, is joined by Glamorgan team-mate Prem Sisodiya while Yorkshire's Harry Brook will captain the side.

"The players have shown with their performances in the Tri-Series in South Africa over the last couple of weeks that they can travel with plenty of optimism," said David Graveney, a member of the Under-19s selection panel.

"This is an exciting opportunity to travel to New Zealand, and to test themselves against the outstanding players from other countries in this age group."

"It's also worth congratulating Middlesex, Somerset, Worcestershire and Glamorgan, who contribute the majority of the squad, as a reward for the quality of their Academies."

Head coach Jon Lewis will be assisted by Jonathan Trott as batting coach, Neil Killeen as fast bowling coach, and Chris Taylor as fielding coach.

The team play warm-up games against Ireland and Sri Lanka before the World Cup group matches get underway from January 15-20 with games against Namibia, Bangladesh and Canada.

Oswestry sign off with narrow defeat

DESPITE tries from skipper Andrew Smith and Jonathan Hughes, Oswestry's rugby players just failed to become the first side to win at Heaton Moor in the South Lancs and Cheshire Two.

They had led 12-7, but the Stockport hosts clawed their way back in the second half to prevail 20-12 to complete the double over their visitors.

The Eagles now take a break from league action before hosting Didsbury and Toch H on Saturday, January 6.

COBRA made a welcome return to action in the Welsh League division two (north) as they ran out 17-7 winners at home to Llanidloes.

Playing their first league game since October 21, the Meifod side prevailed in heavy conditions against their Powys rivals to keep alive their chances of promotion.

Victory took them up one place to fourth, and they are six points adrift of second placed Wrexham with two games in hand.

The Llanfair side face backlog of games in the new year as they are also involved in the Swalec Bowl against Pembroke, and the last eight of the Conwy Land Rover North Wales Intermediate Cup when they visit Llanidloes.
